Hospital board postpones accreditation inspection

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.
Hancock General Hospital's Board of Trustees has indefinitely delayed a scheduled Feb. 25 Joint Commission of Hospital Accreditation inspection at the Bay St. Louis facility.

of America's Nursing Systems Management Services representative, to postpone the February inspection to allow time to correct several deficiencies cited in an earlier inspection.

Hospital Corp. of America is a management company contracted by the board several months ago to improve hospital operation.

McAfee also recommended steps be taken to comply with several 'recommendations' resulting from a recent U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare survey.

The HCA specialist said the hospital should meet HEW standards before a 're-survey' next month or the hospital could lose its Medicare-Medicaid reimbursement funding 'if they fail to pass.'

Chief of Medical Staff and Trustee Dr. Joseph Lee objected to delaying the inspection and urged the board to seek one-year commission accreditation.

However, the board voted to delay the inspection in hopes of gaining two-year accreditation.

Lee stated 'it would be a mistake' to delay the commission inspection. He cast the only negative vote.

At a regular monthly board meeting Monday night, new hospital Administrator Phillip Langston reported, "For several months there has been no documentation (record keeping)."

"We will be able to show documentation in the future and we're going to request an accreditation survey in June," he explained.

Trustee Brother Martin Hernandez, SC, suggested, "You need to remind your people that Medicare pointed out several things. We have to be ready for them beforehand."

"When are they (HEW) coming back?" Hernandez asked Langston.

"In 30 days," Langston replied.

HCA Group Administrator Roland Richardson noted, "McAfee is laying out a timetable for passing the HEW inspection and she'll plug this in when she returns here."

Langston reported, "I went through the last joint commission thing and in essence we were given a one-year accreditation."

"The areas where there was the greatest noncompliance have been taken care of," he said.

Regarding the hospital's efforts to collect some $1 million in outstanding accounts, new Controller Mike Halford reported $10,000 was collected after the first day of a new bill collections program.

Halford said no total figures of bad debts collected were available, but noted the hospital previously 'wrote off' some 4,000 accounts.

"We will have to re-educate the community regarding payment of hospital bills and we will give good service, but good health care costs money," he explained.

The controller reported several accounts would be turned over to local attorneys and collection agencies.

Board President Rev. Charles Johnson asked if U.S. Commercial, a previously utilized agency, would be engaged for bill collection.

Halford replied, "Going over meeting minutes I noted the board had problems with U.S. Commercial."

"People said they had paid and we didn't receive money," he noted.

"The 25 percent rate they charge is good, but if we can pay one-third and get a return it's all the better," Halford explained.

"I want results from that standpoint and we will not let accounts get the way they have been," he stated.

The controller noted itemized statements are being mailed to individuals with delinquent accounts.

—Heard a report from the administrator that the hospital is seeking a full-time physical therapist;

—Heard a report from Langston that a hospital beautification project is underway. He said one room being designated as a project area. The administrator encourages suggestions from the community;

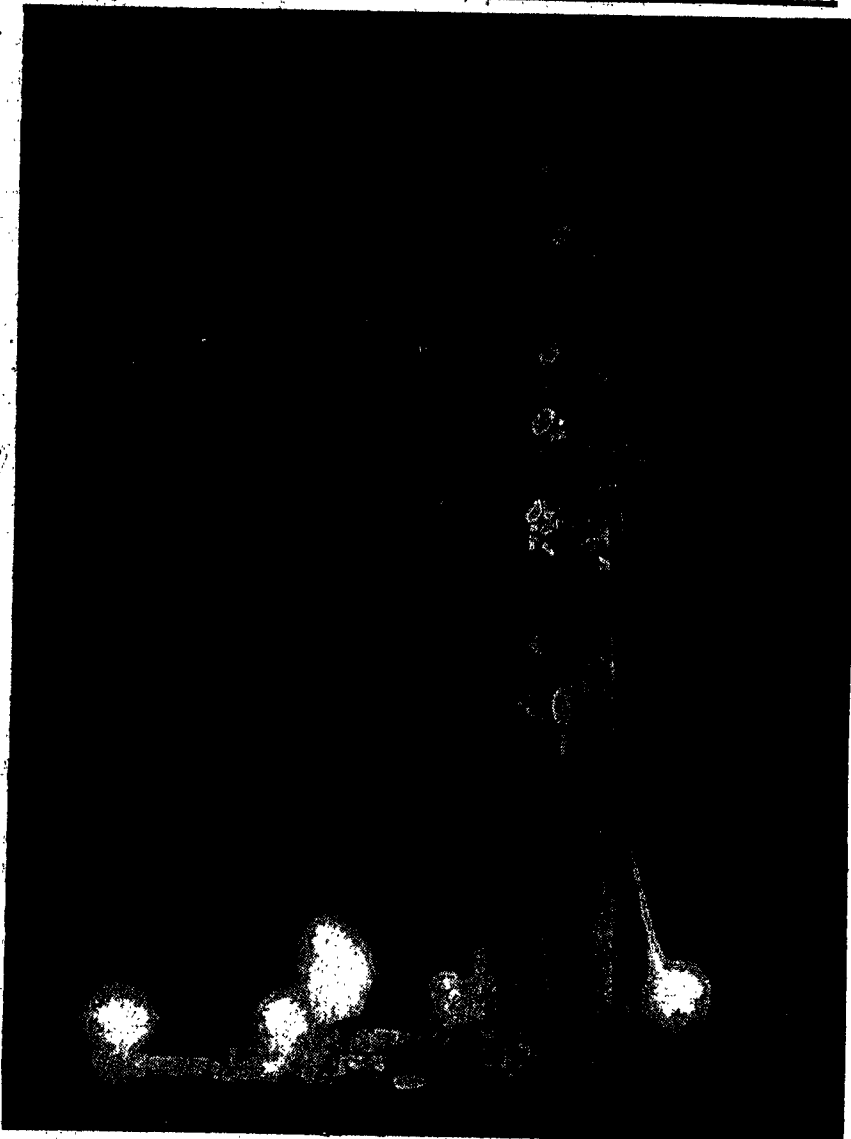

—Heard a report from Langston that a Safety Committee would have to be re-established at the hospital;

—Heard a report from the administrator that he is in the process of composing a new employee handbook to 'provide more benefits for employees';

—Heard a report from Langston that a graduate college student will conduct prenatal education classes at the hospital;

—Accepted a Utilization Review Plan.

24-HOUR JOB—Drilling crews of Spooner Petroleum Co. of Jackson are working 24-hour days at this drilling site on Hwy. 603 just northwest of the I-10 interchange in Hancock County. A company official reports the rig's drilling depth Thursday is expected to reach approximately 11,500 feet. Work began at the well site Jan. 1 toward the Mooringsport Formation at 13,500 feet which is yielding natural gas in the surrounding Waveland Field. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Martin to produce 24 shuttle tanks per year

The Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., has amended a contract with Martin Marietta Aerospace, Denver (Colo.) Division, to add and modify tooling to support a production rate of 24 Space Shuttle lightweight external tanks a year.

The amendment adds $6.5 million to the existing external tank design and development contract, bringing the total value of the contract to more than half a billion dollars.

It calls for the new and modified tooling to be in place at the production facility by December 1982.

The external tank, which stands more than 154 feet tall and carries the liquid propellants for the Space Shuttle's three main engines, is assembled by Martin Marietta at the Marshall Center's Michoud Assembly Facility in New Orleans, La.

The tank is the largest, and when fully fueled, heaviest element of NASA's reusable Space Shuttle, and the only major element not designed to be recovered for reuse.

The Marshall Space Flight Center is responsible for managing external tank development.

GAS LINE REPLACED — Richard Fayard, left, Bay St. Louis City Gas Division foreman, checks as Alfred Selle prepares to turn gas on line replacement in the 500 block of St. John Wednesday. Severe leakage in old line prompted replacement of 800 feet of the line as a budgeted item, according to City Mayor Larry Bennett. Applications have been submitted for grants to repair other leakage in the gas system. Residents of the street were notified prior to several hours of gas curtailment in writing Tuesday and the Police Department used loudspeakers Wednesday morning. Fayard said all gas meters affected were shut off by city crews and that service was restored only when residents were at home. The service was restored in five hours and persons not at home were left a notice to call the utility department to have someone come out and relight pilot lights. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

Some 4,000 homeowners return exemption forms

By ELLIS CUEVAS
On January 1st, a total of 5,500 homestead exemption forms were mailed from the tax collector-assessor's office.

Edward Murtagh, tax collector-assessor, reports that 4,000 of these forms have been signed and returned to his office.

The deadline for filing for homestead exemption is before April 1, 1981.

Murtagh said, "If a homeowner did not receive a homestead exemption form, and is eligible, please call the assessor's office at 467-5727."

Several of the forms mailed out were returned, according to Murtagh, because of incomplete addresses or wrong address.

One item on the 1980 homestead exemption form envelope had instructions to place auto vehicle license tag numbers.

Murtagh stated, "After the envelopes were printed for this year, we learned that this information is no longer necessary for the state on the homestead exemption forms."

The mailing of the forms is a program instituted by Murtagh last year so persons could file for the homestead exemption without having to appear at the courthouse.

Yvonne Ladner, deputy assessor, commented, "Persons physically unable to sign their homestead exemptions can call the office and the clerk will sign for them, but only the clerks have this power."

The savings for homestead exemptions in the county means about half the normal taxes for homeowners.

The assessor's office will be open from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Jan. 24, and 31 for persons unable to come during regular hours, according to Murtagh.

Sheriff's Department needs new patrol cars

By BRENT MACEY
Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson informed the board of supervisors Tuesday of a 'dire need' for two new patrol cars in Hancock County.

Peterson said two Ford patrol cars purchased in February of last year have close to 100,000 miles each.

He said the cars have run 24 hours a day for the last year.

"The cars have done real well, but they are starting to cost the county money," Peterson said.

He stated $949 is all that remains in the department's capital outlay budget fund.

Peterson said Ford Motor Company's cost estimates for replacing the engines and transmissions with new ones including labor are $2,600 for the engine and $1,391 for the transmission.

"If it will cost that much for an engine and transmission I think we would be better off buying a new car," Peterson said.

The board questioned if there might be a less expensive cost for the engines and transmissions. They moved to advertise for a new car and engines and review the problem at the next meeting.

Board member Roger Dale Ladner asked Peterson to consider the possibility of installing offices in the northern part of the county to cut costs for patrolling the area.

Peterson said he had previously discussed the possibility with other board members.

"I would like to keep the patrol cars on the road as long as possible. I feel a patrol car in rural areas cuts down on the amount of crime and also makes people feel safer."

Peterson also informed the board of a $15,000 Law Enforcement Administration Grant enabling his department to build an additional door from the office to the jail, two rooms at the back of the sheriff's office and also enlarge the kitchen area.

He asked the board to advertise for bids for materials adding the inmates would supply the labor.

Peterson said the door would present another fire exit for the prisoners and also allow the access directly to the cells from the booking office.

In other business the board heard a report from Burk and Associates Engineers of New Orleans on environmental impact assessment and

Defendant guilty in Cox manslaughter

By BRENT MACEY
Holly Jean Wilson, 39, accused of murdering her common law husband Charlie Cox Sept. 26, 1980 in their home in Wheel Inn trailer park in Bay St. Louis, testified in her own defense Wednesday at the Hancock County Court room.

Under questioning from defense attorney Henry Cook, Wilson stated she knew Cox for ten years, living with him for three of those years.

Asked if she was beaten and if the beating got worse as time went on, Wilson answered 'yes' to both questions.

She stated Cox beat her 'anytime he had been drinking.'

"Every week of every two weeks, mostly weekends," Wilson answered. She testified she had been threatened with a gun by Cox two times within a year of the incident.

One incident described by Wilson occurred in their trailer home while the couple were preparing to go for a ride. Wilson said Cox pulled a 30-30 from a closet and fired a shot, 'near my legs.'

Bulletin

A 12-man jury convicted Holly Jean Wilson of manslaughter shortly after 6 p.m. Wednesday. She is sentenced to two years in prison and is currently on a $10,000 appeal bond. Wilson was charged with the shooting death of her common-law husband Charlie Cox on Sept. 26, 1980.

"He started laughing," Wilson said. She stated Cox said, "Unless I tell you I'm going to kill you, you don't have to worry about it."

When asked if she had ever called police Wilson said yes but that she never had Cox arrested.

She stated, "Charlie was scared to death to be put back in Hancock County jail and I swore I would never do that."

"I loved him," Wilson added crying and wiping her eyes. "He was a good man when he was not drinking. He helped around the house. He was extremely good. I can not say he was not."

Wilson explained events of the morning in a manner which Cox woke her only when drunk.

She said she got up to put on a pot of coffee and while she was looking for her house coat Cox went to the bathroom. She said Cox told her to load the shotgun and 'bring it here.'

She said she loaded the gun and placed the gun against the door frame of the

Gaudet services set at Christ Episcopal

Funeral services for William G. (Bill) Gaudet, 72, of Waveland, noted Hancock County journalist and businessman, are to be at 11 a.m. Thursday at Christ Episcopal Church in Bay St. Louis.

Visitation is to be from 10 to 11 a.m. at the church. Burial in the Coward Family Cemetery, Bay St. Louis, will follow services.

A resident of 101 Aiken Road and former Hancock County correspondent for The Sun, Mr. Gaudet died at Hancock General Hospital Monday, Jan. 19, 1981.

He was a member of the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club and Christ Episcopal Church. He was a Republican.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Coral Kukuk Gaudet of Waveland; a son, William Gerald Gaudet; and a daughter, Mrs. Noelle Gaudet Kimelman, both of Lafayette, La.; and seven grandchildren.

Born in St. James, La., Sept. 21, 1908, Mr. Gaudet moved to the Coast in 1947.

He graduated from Tulane University and majored in chemistry. While at Tulane he worked for the New Orleans Item.

In 1931 he was editor of the English section of El Sol in Monterey, Mexico. He was later employed by International News Service and covered the assassination of Huey Long in 1935.

After working for various newspapers and wire services, including United Press International and International News Service, he was appointed by Nelson Rockefeller in 1941 as executive secretary of the Coordination Committee for Costa Rica, one of eight branches of an organization whose purpose was to enhance the U.S. war effort in Latin America.

After World War II, Mr. Gaudet served as a State Department press attache in Latin America for several months, then he became a roving reporter in that region for U.S. News and World Report. Through the backing of friends in the United States, he began publishing the Latin American Report, a newsletter that became a widely read magazine in 1956. At the same time, he was a part-time operative for the Central Intelligence Agency. He published the magazine until 1969.

With the inception of The Sun on Oct. 1, 1973, he became the Coast newspaper's Hancock County correspondent and served in that capacity until the fall of 1980, when he became a special columnist for the weekend editions of The Sun and The Daily Herald.

In 1974, Mr. Gaudet, along with Waveland Mayor John Longo, was presented a brass plaque for services rendered in having President Ford give a disaster classification to the Coast, making it possible for fishermen to receive unemployment checks, food stamps and SBA disaster loans.

In 1977, he and former Sun staff writer Mack Dryden shared a second place award in the annual Louisiana-Mississippi Associated Press Writing Contest for their investigative reporting on local 16th Section school land abuses.

His last published work, a reminiscence of his 1941 encounter with then Col. George S. Patton in Louisiana, was published in the Jan. 18 edition of The Sun and The Daily Herald.

Although he was never a fulltime agent for the CIA, Mr. Gaudet, as a result of his intimate knowledge of Latin American affairs, had been asked a number of times in the 1940s and 1950s to prepare reports for the agency. He had also been involved in covert operations in Costa Rica during World War II, years before the creation of the CIA.

In 1978, he testified before the House Select Committee on Assassinations, the special panel created to probe, among other things, the circumstances surrounding the murder of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963. Months before Kennedy's assassination in Dallas, Mr. Gaudet obtained a passport to Mexico the day before Lee Harvey Oswald, Kennedy's accused slayer, obtained a passport for the same destination.

The House committee never released details of Mr. Gaudet's testimony.

Mr. Gaudet's knowledge of Latin America and Cuba and his circumstantial links to Oswald and New Orleans businessman Clay Shaw (who was tried and acquitted of conspiring to kill Kennedy) brought him to the attention of the national and international media.

He was interviewed dozens of times by various organizations, including the University of Southern Mississippi's Oral History Program, which preserves in audio tape, in the voices of the people involved, the memories and perceptions of important people and their observations and of important historical events.

MOTIVATIONS FOR BUYING

Strong forces are keeping the single home market very much alive despite the increasing price trend over the past several years. A probe into motivations behind current sales has found that buyers are convinced that home ownership is worth the financial sacrifice for environmental reasons. A better place for their children to live and the farther from the city the better.

A second powerful influence is inflation. Buyers are convinced that the housing inventory is too short to see any significant over supply or reduction in value in their lifetime. Another influence, not to be ignored, is retirement. In many cases, home ownership offers the only hope to enter retirement in a condition other than poverty. Since Social Security was designed as a supplement and not sufficient to live on, a free and clear home, or the investment potential of home equity, provides a solid base for retirement.

TREES—NATURE'S WAY TO DIMINISH NOISES

Man has used trees as sound barriers to cut down on noise pollution since ancient times. Now forestry researchers are finding some scientific validity in this common sense practice in reducing noise.

Plant a tree, or plant two or three, and you will have maximum benefit as sound barriers.

Each 100-foot width of trees can absorb about 6 to 8 decibels of sound intensity.

This may seem like a small amount in light of the fact that normal speech generates about 40 decibels; a busy intercity highway, 72 to 78; a barking dog, 92; a beeping horn, 110; a screaming set, more than 140.

But, a reduction, no matter how slight is welcome, since it can make the difference between a livable environment and one that is extremely unpleasant.

We should also bear in mind that this 100-foot screen has a multiplier effect. One hundred and fifty will decrease the noise 9 to 12 decibels, and so on.

According to researchers, sound levels above 50 decibels may become irritable to human beings; sound levels in excess of 130 decibels may become harmful.

How can trees be used "correctly" to give their maximum benefit as sound barriers?

Many factors contribute to sound control by trees. These factors include size, position, and density of trees, as well as certain meteorological conditions—like wind, moisture, temperature and terrain.

Along highways, dense plantings of large trees will effectively lower the level of noise, particularly if the sound source is lower than the receiver.

This means that trees planted uphill of a highway will give maximum sound control.

Trees will also effectively moderate wind and temperature, and reduce any influence that these two factors might have on the transmission of sound.

Often the human senses of sight and sound can reinforce one another, so that seeing what causes a noisy discomfort will tend to aggravate it.

On the contrary, if the source of sound is made invisible, the sound will not seem so harsh to the ear.

As another approach to noise abatement, therefore, trees can be planted to screen or camouflage noisy neighbors. This will have a marked effect on lowering unwanted sound.

Consideration should be given to the locations of the source of sound. In the case of aircraft, a belt of trees around the airport will reduce sound levels when the aircraft are on the ground. However, once they are airborne the sound has only to penetrate through the thin forest canopy.

Still, if it's city noises that get you down, perhaps you should remove your ear-muffs take away the blinders, and plant yourself some trees. Trees are one of nature's ways to make your environment more pleasant.

Military medical registration open

After three months of enrolling active duty and retired military personnel, in and around the Keesler area, in the DEERS Program, eligibility checking started Jan. 15.

Military sponsors and dependents seeking health care at Keesler or Gulfport will have their eligibility for health benefits verified through the use of a computer. There will be virtually no time delay for checking and, in most instances, treatment will be more expeditious.

The DEERS program will save the taxpayers money as well as reduce the waiting lines for those individuals who are entitled to benefits.

The more far reaching effects of the program will help the office of the Secretary of Defense for Health Care improve the management and administration of hospitals and assist in resource planning and control.

Enrollment will remain open through the end of January in Sablich Center, Room 233. The program is mandatory and those obtaining treatment will be required to show proof of eligibility within a certain period of time by enrolling in the DEERS Program. Those not enrolling may be billed for treatment received.

For information, call 377-3337.

The release of the American Hostages is something a lot of folks have been praying to take place for over one year.

We did not realize just how close to home the hostage situation was until we found out that the brother of one of the Americans resides in our neighboring city of Poplarville.

The hostage crises was one of the biggest headaches for former president Jimmy Carter.

We know his administration had many other problems, but we feel the hostage situation was the one of most crisis.

We are glad our fellow Americans are now free and hope proper actions will be taken by America to those responsible.

People will steal anything, and our community is no different from any others.

We received a telephone call from Mary Evans, Corinth Drive, Bay St. Louis, reporting that someone had stolen their American Flag off the front porch of their residence.

Ms. Evans said she would very much have liked to have flown the flag for President Ronald Reagan's inaugural celebration.

The flag was a gift from Jim Evans' aunt and Ms. Evans reports that she and her husband have always displayed a flag at their residence.

The Evans and their two children have been involved in Scouting over the years and are very patriotic.

Ms. Evans said that if the person who took the flag would return it, she would ask no questions.

We congratulate all the persons at NSTL for the complete success of the three-engine test firing Saturday.

Many of our residents of Hancock County were involved in the preparation and test firing of the engines.

Whenever the Columbia is launched at Cape Canaveral, we know Hancock County played a part in the venture.

The annual Bay High Invitational Basketball Tournament got underway last night with more action tonight, Friday and Saturday.

The tourney which started with Pass Christian, Long Beach, Bay Senior High, East Central, Hancock North Central, Pearl River Central, St. Martin and Vancleave with boy and girl representatives also has St. Stanislaus boys and d'Iberville girls.

Play will again begin this afternoon at 3:45 p.m. when the Bay High Tigerettes tangle with the Long Beach Bearkittens. The final game tonight will see the Bay High Tigers and East Central Hornets starting at 8:45.

Four games are on tap Friday starting at 5 p.m. with the championship finals Saturday night. The girls' championship will start at 7 p.m. Saturday with the boy's action starting at 8:30 p.m.

We do not know who the favorites are in the girls' brackets, but have to feel that in the boy's division the St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chaws who are undefeated at the start of the tourney are our choice. That was not hard to make.

In order to make this tourney a big success, there is a need for attendance by the public. We hope all of you will try and see some of the action, fill the Tiger Dome.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank the forest fire fighters who have operated in Hancock County the past couple of weeks.

This has been the worst two week period for forest fires that Hancock County has had in over twenty years.

In the last couple of weeks we have had more than 120 fires which consumed some 1,200 acres of prime forest lands in this county.

A handful of jackasses have been getting away with purposely setting the woods afire.

This useless crime puts people and property in jeopardy and is taking money out of the pockets of each of us. On the average, throughout the U.S., 25 forest fire fighters die annually in the line of duty.

I thank God that here in Hancock County we have been extremely lucky.

At one time last week we had fire crews from St. Regis Paper Company, International Paper Company, a Forestry Commission crew from Pearl River County, local volunteer fire departments and our normal Forestry Commission fire crews and detection crews and we still could barely keep up with the wildfires.

I want to publicly thank and commend all of them for a job well done during an extremely difficult time.

It is time for the citizens of Hancock County to say to the arsonists that this is quite enough. The ones who start these fires should be put behind bars.

One day, I pray it will never happen, but one day some one in this county is going to die because of this useless crime.

That death will not only be on the conscience of the arsonist but John Q. Citizen who had information and would not come forward.

We have had people call in but would not get involved. There is a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a woods arsonist.

The decision is up to the citizens of Hancock County.

Yours truly,
Rand D. Riedrich
Hancock County Forester

SENSELESS DESTRUCTION—Someone apparently driving a truck or four-wheel drive vehicle of some kind deliberately tore through a hedge and retaining wall on property belonging to St. Augustine Seminary along Second Street in Bay St. Louis. The seminary's beautifully landscaped grounds have been vandalized on numerous occasions. Hopefully these thoughtless individuals will be apprehended. The priests, brothers, novices and seminarians of St. Augustine have contributed immeasurably to our community by offering many free services. Their beautifully manicured grounds which they have maintained meticulously over the years are an asset to our community. Although they have lost irreplaceable shrubs, trees and structures due to vandalism such as this, in the Christian spirit they never complain, they just clean up the damage and continue to help our community.

All human beings are created equal

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The Great Sexist Language Dispute" by Frank Patrick, who teaches political science in an obscure Eastern college, is furnished to The Sea Coast Echo courtesy of Public Research, Syndicated, of Claremont, Calif.

Men! We—you and I—have been guilty of a grievous fault. We have been speaking sexist language all our lives, to the gross injury of the female sex.

Ladies! Forgive us, for we knew not what we did. When we used such phrases as "All men are created equal," we did not realize that we were leaving you out. We honestly thought that "men" covered all human beings, male and female alike.

What chauvinist pigs we were! But, you must admit, we were not alone in our error. Many a woman has reached a certain age without being aware that she was the victim of sexist language.

She probably talked it herself. It is only recently that her consciousness has been raised and she has come to see that using "man" and "he" to designate a human being without distinction of sex is a studied insult to women.

But now the dawn has come and we all see—we do not?—that in fairness we must always use "person" and "he or she" instead of the old, offensive "man" and "he."

"All persons are created equal" lacks the crispness of Jefferson's phrase, but it says exactly what it means.

There is some loss to Shakespeare's poetic quality in saying, "What a piece of work is person!"

There is a definite loss in making the Psalmist ask, "What is person that Thou art mindful of him or her!"

But this may not be too high a price to pay for sexual equality.

When we come to Alexander Pope's line, "Presume not God to scan; the proper study of mankind is man," however, we can't help feeling that something has gone wrong with the way we use the English tongue.

What has gone wrong is the feminists' insistence that "man" and "he" refer exclusively to the male sex. In fact, the primary meaning of "man" is "human being." The name of our species is Man, and it is applied only secondarily to the two sexes.

What, after all, is "woman" but the word "man" with a prefix ("wo") meaning "female!" If we want to reform the English language, we'd do better to keep "man" as referring to any human being, male or female, and to think up a prefix meaning "male" that we can put before "man" to correspond to the "wo" in "woman."

The obvious prefix to use would be "male." But calling half the human race "maleman" would suggest that the Post Office is even more overstaffed than it really is. A better solution could be to use the Latin word "vir."

It is an unambiguous word that means "adult male human being" and nothing else.

I propose, therefore, that from now on we call adult males "virmen" to distinguish them from women.

The beauty of this new word is that, when pronounced rapidly, it sounds just like "vermin," which is what feminists want to call us anyhow.

NEWS FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

NEW RESOURCEFULNESS

"A new resourcefulness" in state government is needed to help secure a prosperous and stable economic future for Mississippi, Governor William Winter told members of the Mississippi Legislature on the opening day of the 1981 session.

While acknowledging that the state's financial situation is somewhat bleak, Winter said it would be a mistake to curtail those government programs that promote economic growth and opportunity for Mississippians.

Noting that Mississippi is an emerging state with great potential for growth, Winter said it would be a mistake not to enact legislation designed to spur the state's economic development and insure an expansion of job opportunities.

"Within a framework of austerity and economy, we must somehow find the means of meeting our responsibilities to maintain adequate and competitive programs in education, in economic development, in health care, in transportation, in law enforcement, and in the conservation of our natural resources Winter said.

"This is going to take a new resourcefulness and unusual commitment, but I am convinced it can be done." The need for resourcefulness - maintaining fiscal responsibility while initiating programs to develop the state - was the theme of Winter's address.

"I assure you that I am committed to curtailing the unnecessary expansion of government as much as anybody in this state," Winter continued, but I am also dedicated to seeing that we not deny our people those opportunities that can be realized only through programs that develop our human and natural resources."

Winter said Mississippians are "living in a state that is just now beginning to move. We cannot," he said, "ignore the responsibility that rests on us to provide adequately for the essential requirements of an emerging state."

ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Governor William Winter has announced a Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP) in the amount of $12,917,719 to provide financial assistance to an estimated 150,000 low-income Mississippi households for the upcoming winter months.

The program, designed to help meet rising energy costs, will be administered by the Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs and the Department of Human Development, Division of Human Resources, through the state's 20 community action agencies and other community based organizations.

These agencies began taking applications on January 12 and all eligible recipients must be certified through an application process to obtain program benefits.

When applying, applicants must bring proof of household income, such as check stubs, pay slips, or written statements from employers regarding wages.

Eligible group are low-income households who are affected by energy cost increases. Operators of public or subsidized housing may be eligible on behalf of their tenants. Benefits to recipients will vary from $50 to $200 depending on income, region of the state, type of heating used, and category of eligibility.

The Bottom Line

Candid Answers To Your Questions About Advertising and Business Topics.

By S. GALE DENLEY
Associate Professor of Journalism
University of Mississippi

We are trying to get more heat than in our ads and wondering if it would be worth the effort. If so, how can we do it? We're Ready For A Change.

Dear RFAC: Localizing ads is certainly worth the effort if it is done well and in an effective manner.

So the answer to one part of your question will be conditioned by the answer to the other.

But, localized ads almost always produce more results if they have sufficient substance in addition to the local angle.

Your approach will depend on the product or service being offered; so let's look at some examples.

If the product is paint, you might utilize local house painters who use your brand for testimonials. Be sure to get their written permission.

Photos and copy could feature them and why they use the particular brand, but also include supporting data as supplied by the manufacturer.

On the other hand if you are offering for the do-it-yourselfer market illustrate your ads with a local do-it-yourselfer in the process of using the paint.

Barely is an exterior, or for that matter interior of your store of much value. The exception would be if you want to illustrate great variety, inventory, or whatever the thrust of the particular ad may be.

This kind of promotion will cost you more for you will have the cost of photos and possibly, ad copy writing, in addition to the space charges.

But the results should be increased by a significant amount - far more than the extra cost.

Don't be afraid to try it yourself. With a good camera and a little patience you should, with help from your local newspaper ad representative, get creditable results.

One tip, do a series of ads rather than one at a time. This way you'll spend less time, and also be more likely to have continuity within the series.

COUNTY ROADS AN EXPENSIVE HABIT

Management of county road programs in Mississippi, with few exceptions, is a five-way proposition, with each supervisor having his own labor force, equipment budget, and method of building and maintaining roads in his district.

This results in over 400 county road departments commanding approximately 60 percent of each county's revenue - excluding schools.

A study conducted in the early 1970's for the state Legislature concluded, "Counties with central control procedures, wherein the five districts are combined into one, tend to reduce the inefficiency, illegality, and other undesirable elements that thrive in other counties." This same investigative committee reported losses of "millions of dollars" due to inefficient management of the county road systems operating under the beat system.

A Mississippi Economic Council study - conducted at the same time as the legislative investigation - revealed that among the states, an average of 17.5 percent of all highway user taxes was used for county road purposes.

In Mississippi, 35 percent of these revenues was used for county road purposes - twice the national average.

Under a county unit system - where all county road work is administered on a countywide basis - management of county roads would mean more efficient use of tax dollars while improving the administration and maintenance of county road programs. And, the MEC recommends that the Legislature require consolidation of all county and road activities under the county unit plan.

The state's highway system should be a major item of consideration in the 1981 Legislature. Lawmakers are faced with problems related to highway construction, financing, and weight limits.

But, there is a fourth item of paramount importance lawmakers are urged to consider - replacing the current three-member elected Highway Commission with a five-member appointed commission.

Mississippi's three-member Highway Commission - the only popularly elected highway system governing body in the nation - operates in many respects as three separate highway departments, despite the appointment of the highway department director and the department's support staff in Jackson.

The Mississippi Economic Council recommends a five-member commission be appointed, with one commissioner from each congressional district, with terms of office staggered to prevent selection of a majority of the five commissioners during any four-year term.

Other MEC recommendations include limiting the commission's authority to policy making, approval of bids and contracts, and selection of the department director subject to confirmation by the state Senate.

And, the director should have the authority to hire and fire at all levels within the department and administer the state's highway program under policies set by the commission.

The MEC recognizes that constructing and maintaining the highways, roads, and streets of the state require expenditures second only to education.

It is important, therefore, that the commission and department operate with coordination and cooperation to provide the services needed by Mississippi and its growing demands for transportation.

Keesler personnel attend base seminar

Some 15 officers and five civilians recently completed Keesler's Air Command and Staff College seminar, Glenn Ryan, education services officer, said this week in Biloxi.

"The 50-week program provides mid-level management training to captains and majors and civilian employees in the grade of GS-11 or higher," Ryan explained.

"Three new seminars will begin here next week with a total of 25 officers and 11 civilians enrolled," he noted.

Ryan said seven vacancies still remain and interested persons should contact the education services office at 377-2323.

Civilians completing the seminar were Sidney R. Samrall, Marvin L. Clayton, and Buddy J. Robinson from the 3410th Technical Training Group; Rex F. White of the 3300th Technical Training Wing; and Patricia A. Timmer of Det. 333, Air Force Adult Agency.

Area residents invited to Ford event in Jackson

Evelyn McPhail of the Diamondhead Community will join Leon Bramlett of Clarksdale and other prominent Republicans in hosting "An Evening With President Ford" the special GOP victory celebration to be in Jackson, Feb. 6, at the Coliseum Ramada Inn.

"Since most Mississippians were not able to attend the inauguration festivities in Washington, D.C., Tuesday, Evelyn and Leon will join with President Ford in leading a special victory celebration in Jackson which all Mississippians can attend," Dinner Chairman, James T. Speed said this week.

"We want to make this dinner an outstanding success because so many Mississippians worked so hard to carry the state for Ronald Reagan and they deserve a rousing celebration," Bramlett stated.

"And we want to make it a success because we need to raise a sizeable amount of money to help Gil Carmichael settle his 1979 campaign debt," he added.

"Many of us differed with Gil on the issues, but he has helped make this party a contender. He is one of the pioneer members of our team and one of us intend to allow his recent loss to push him to financial ruin," Bramlett explained.

Dr. James Moye of Laurel, a member of the GOP state committee, echoed Bramlett's comments by stating, "We cannot leave our wounded lying on the battlefield, we must help them."

"An Evening With President Ford is an attempt by a broad consensus of Republican leaders to put Gil's debt to rest so we can close out the Mississippi Republican chapter on the 70's and get on with our promising chapter on the 80's," stated McPhail, a member of the Republican National Committee.

The dinner itself will spotlight many of the newly emerging Republican leaders who will be the candidates to take us to new victories during the 80's. These new leaders will share the podium with President Ford," said Speed.

"An Evening With President Ford is a celebration of our great victory this past November, but it is also the beginning of a new dedication to Republican teamwork," stated Bramlett.

"By winning our first outright majority in a close statewide race, we opened the door to accomplish here what Ronald Reagan and 52 Republican senators are about to accomplish in Washington," he added.

The dinner will begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 6, at the Coliseum Ramada Inn in Jackson.

Tickets are available at $125 each from a local Republican county chairman or contact Ar. Evening With President Ford, P.O. Box 1271, Meridian, Miss. 39301 or telephone (601-5141).

SALADS TO THE RESCUE

Salads can be as varied as your imagination.

People have been eating salad ingredients for centuries. Today there are almost limitless ways to combine all the foods we normally eat in salad form. From a nutritional and budget standpoint and because salads are such colorful and attractive foods by themselves, they are becoming more important.

Good salad techniques include selecting the best ingredients and combining them tastefully. Use only crisp greens for the base of the salad or for a tossed salad. As soon as you bring the greens home, wash them thoroughly, drain and store in a plastic bag or other container in the refrigerator.

Buy greens which are in season and, when possible, keep a variety on hand. Iceberg, Boston and leaf lettuce, endive, escarole, romaine, tender spinach, cabbage leaves and watercress are excellent salad greens.

Almost any vegetable, fruit or meat will make a good salad. For the heart of the salad, combine or arrange salads just before serving. Always chill canned fruits and drain them thoroughly. Arrange in a neat, uncluttered manner. Watch for color, texture and flavor variety when you combine ingredients.

Choose a dressing to complement the salad. Many prepared dressings are available for vegetable, fruit or meat salads. Or, you may have a favorite recipe.

For easy and convenient salad making, keep your canned foods shelf well stocked. Canned foods are easy to store in a cool, dark, dry place. Watch for ones you use often. When they are on special, stock up for quick notice meals.

Accompaniment salads should be light rather than substantial. Serve them in middle-sized portions either as a first course appetizer or with the main course. You may even use these salads to garnish the serving platter or dinner plate. Individual salads help make a pretty place setting.

Bread sticks or tiny crackers are nice to go with the salad that you serve at the beginning of the meal, but aren't necessary for salads that accompany the meal.

When the "salad makes the meal," it's a main dish salad. They are easy to prepare, attractive and economical when you choose ingredients carefully. Be sure the main dish salad is substantial and satisfying. Use a large plate so it will not be crowded. Ready-to-use canned meats, fruits and vegetables save time and energy.

At the same time, cold air from your house is sucked through a lower vent back into the solar heater. The air is heated and the cycle continues.

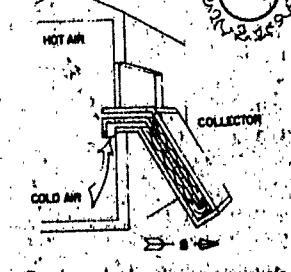

Woodworkers' Forum

Question: With the high cost of energy, I've considered installing a solar heater for my house. But I've looked at them and they seem complicated and expensive. Any ideas?

Answer: Passive solar heaters are inexpensive and simple to build. They run on pure sunlight; no active pumping and faning are required.

Passive solar systems only require a south-facing glass or plastic panel which sunlight passes through and a material under the glass or plastic panel to absorb the sunlight. Once absorbed, the sunlight energy becomes thermal energy or heat. This thermal energy does not pass through glass or plastic as easily as light, so most of the heat is trapped.

County wastewater plan questioned by Council

By BRENT MACEY

The Bay St. Louis City Council meeting Tuesday night erupted into a lively wastewater treatment discussion when Councilman Fred Wagner proposed a three-page resolution which, if adopted, would stall any definite commitments to the Regional Authority.

Today, Jan. 22, is the deadline for Bay St. Louis to sign a 99-year contract with the Regional Authority if the city wishes to enter that program at a 'postage stamp rate.'

Wagner's resolution states, "The City of Bay St. Louis has expressed its desire to preserve its standing and position with the Gulf Coast Regional Wastewater Management Authority until such time as a better alternative can be found."

The resolution also requests the Wastewater Authority consult with the Regional Authority and resolve the substantial differences in cost estimates in a form understandable to a layman and provide a specific time table for securing approval of its program from the Environmental Protection Agency and the State Pollution Agency.

The council voted unanimously to table the resolution until the next meeting tonight, Jan. 22, at 5 p.m.

Wagner said the idea behind the resolution is to keep motion in the direction of finalizing the contract with the regional authority unless we find a cheaper approach.

He said he was appalled by the idea that Wastewater engineers expect Bay St. Louis to pay 96 percent of the cost for joining their treatment facilities when Wastewater will pay only four percent. He added the Wastewater project is still not accepted by the EPA, and that the project calls for 75 percent funding by the federal government, a 25 percent loan from Farmers Home Administration, neither of which have been negotiated.

Councilman James Thriffley agreed, adding, "we can be left out sitting naked and in the cold by adopting the Wastewater program which may be either inoperable or unacceptable to the EPA."

Thriffley said a half million dollar pump station incorporated in the regional plan is not considered in the Wastewater engineers program.

He feels the pump station and un-negotiated loans are hurting the credibility of the local proposal.

Councilman Wilmer Seymour said, "I am not for the Gulf Coast Regional Authority. I will not obligate the good people of Bay St. Louis to a 99-year contract when it is something I am not sure about myself."

"I will not vote for anything unless I am sure of it because I represent the people."

In other business, the board:—Accepted a $5,290 bid from Charlie Henderson Ford of Waveland for a cab and chassis to a utility department truck.

—Accepted a $1,585 bid for the body of the same truck from Truck Equipment Sales Inc. of Mobile, Alabama.

—Approved the $403 sale of surplus property to Richard Garcia.

—Approved an agreement with Broadway and Seal Engineers to proceed with the study of improvements on sections of the road on Main Street from Second to Gex, from Gex to the beach and on South Beach Boulevard from Main Street to deMontuzin, with the condition that the city can withdraw the improvements on one road section if the local 30 percent matching funds are not great enough to cover that final section.

Shoreline resident stabs Waveland man

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Shoreline Park man has been charged with stabbing a Waveland man Tuesday night.

Walter L. Woodward, 21, of Box 117-A, Bay St. Louis, has been charged by the Hancock County Sheriff's Department with aggravated assault in the stabbing of Mike Mercer, a Waveland man in his early 30's.

County Sheriff Ronald A. Peterson Wednesday afternoon said Mercer was treated and released from Hancock General Hospital in Bay St. Louis Tuesday night.

"Woodward was working at Marine Concrete Structures at Port Bienville. Mercer was his foreman," Peterson reported.

"The two men apparently got in a dispute about Woodward being fired. They then agreed to meet at a Bay St. Louis lounge," the sheriff said.

"They then agreed at the lounge to go to an isolated Shoreline Park area to settle the matter," Peterson stated.

"In the isolated area the men apparently got into a fight which resulted in Mercer being wounded on the right side of his back," the sheriff noted.

Peterson said Mercer was apparently slashed with a small pocket knife and some 45 stitches were needed to treat the wound.

Woodward was charged and released from Hancock County Jail on $2,500 bond.

Investigator Delbert Seay is in charge of the case.

CAR RECOVERED

An automobile stolen from a Bay St. Louis realtor was recovered near Mobile.

Bay St. Louis Police Chief Douglas Williams reported Wednesday afternoon the Mobile County Sheriff's Department notified him a 1976 tan and cream Buick LeSabre owned by Carol Powell of Pyramid Realty in Bay St. Louis had been recovered Jan. 15.

The automobile was stolen from a parking area in front of US-90 office on Jan. 13.

Powell said Wednesday afternoon, "There was no visible damage to my car, but the engine has been put through the mill."

"The engine and transmission have been damaged, but I'm waiting now for an estimate of the cost," she stated.

The Bay St. Louis businesswoman said her automobile was found abandoned at the three-mile marker on I-10 near the Alabama-Mississippi state line.

She said the car had run out of gasoline and a spare tire, flashlight and some tools were taken from the vehicle. "But they didn't take any of the paperwork I had in the car, so I got all of that back," Powell added.

bathroom.

"I was going to leave when he started to stand up and was pulling up his underwear. He said, 'I'll blow your head off.'"

"I said leave me alone. I just want to get out. I can't take it anymore," Wilson said tearfully.

She said she grabbed the gun.

"The shot put him back in the bathtub. I thought my God I killed him."

She said barely audibly that she went to the kitchen and put the gun on the table, returned to the bedroom for another shell 'to shoot myself.' After reloading the gun went off a second time.

"I looked up and Charlie was standing in the hall," she said.

"He fell between the kitchen and the hallway up against the wall. He said help me."

In between intermittent sobs Wilson continued, "I said hang on. I'm going after help."

She said Cox's final words were, "Jean, tell them we were struggling over it. Tell them anything. I love you. Please forgive me."

Wilson was excused by Judge Leslie Grant to regain her composure.

Shortly after returning, Assistant District Attorney Richard Smith questioned contradictions in the defendants' taped interview at the Hancock County Sheriff's Department approximately one hour after the shooting.

In that taped testimony heard Tuesday, Wilson said she shot Cox while he was on the toilet and that she had dragged the body into the kitchen so that the Mobile Medic Unit could work on him.

"You mentioned in that tape that you dragged him down the hallway," Smith stated.

Wilson stated she did not think she had stated that in the interview but that she did not remember that interview very well.

He questioned the defendant about

In reference to the hospital's daily attendance figures, Hallford reported an average of at least 33 patients were needed to 'break even' on expenses.

Hospital figures show December average daily attendance of 28 patients.

The controller explained, "33 is an operational figure, this does not include equipment costs. You can pay salaries and supply costs with this number of patients."

Hallford said if the hospital could increase its ADA to 31 patients over the next six months the facility would still lose some $20,000 over that period.

He added that a 35-patient ADA would mean a $27,000 profit for the hospital during the same period.

Regarding contracting a hospital anesthesiologist, the board unanimously accepted a one year contract with Dr. Joseph H. Nodruft of Diamondhead to provide anesthetic services on a fee basis.

Langston reported a nurse anesthetist found by HCA decided not to stay at Hancock General after working a week, so the medical staff recommended negotiating with Nodruft.

The Diamondhead doctor previously provided anesthesiologist services to the hospital.

Langston stated, "The medical staff recommended negotiating a contract with Nodruft."

Lee said, "We've left it up to the administrator to work out details of the contract."

The chief of staff said doctors were interested in a contract requiring Nodruft to respond to calls within 30 minutes.

"When we have to take someone to surgery an anesthesiologist has to be there at least within 30 minutes," Lee explained.

Lee and Langston noted the contract would require Nodruft to provide his own back-up personnel if he is not available.

The administrator said, "This is pretty much the same contract we had with him before, but before he was also working for another hospital."

Langston added, "The doctor said he would give up any practice he had in Slidell and move over here."

Hernandez reported, "Medicare has a hospital in Georgia where its funding was taken away because it only had a nurse anesthetist."

The administrator replied, "Medical practice in a area dictates Medicare standards."

The board met in executive session for some 35 minutes to discuss the contract then accepted the proposal.

In reference to hospital cleaning, the board authorized advertisement for bids to contract a professional housecleaning service for the facility as recommended by Langston.

The administrator noted HCA has contracted a company named Service-master at many of its hospitals.

He said a housecleaning company would probably retain present personnel, but would provide training for those individuals.

In other business at the 7:30 p.m. meeting in the hospital conference room, the board:

—Heard a report from Hallford that the hospital should receive some $73,000 in Medicare-Medicaid refunds soon.

—Heard a report from Langston that a $7,000-$8,000 walk-in freezer was needed.

—Heard a report from Langston that several HCA specialists have been evaluating various areas of the hospital to improve efficiency.

—Heard a report from the administrator that the hospital is seeking a full-time physical therapist.

—Heard a report from Langston that a hospital beautification project is underway. He said one room being designated as a project area. The administrator encourages suggestions from the community.

—Heard a report from the administrator that he is in the process of composing a new employee handbook to provide more benefits for employees.

—Heard a report from Langston that a graduate college student will conduct prenatal education classes at the hospital.

—Accepted a Utilization Review Plan submitted by the medical staff.

development plans for Bayou Caddy Harbor and Texas Flat Road.

William Burk, owner of the firm, informed the board the plans have been completed but that federal funds are not available for the jobs.

The board authorized a $7,897 to the firm for engineering services performed and placed the plans under supervision of the Port and Harbor Commission. They directed the commission to keep their ears to the ground for any future available funding.

Also during the 9 a.m. meeting, the board heard an offer from Edmond Fahey to sell property east of The Sea Coast Echo building facing Court Street in Bay St. Louis to Hancock County.

The board discussed the need for the land for future parking space and expansion of the courthouse and jail.

The board directed its attorney Walter Gex, to meet with Fahey and come up with a sound proposal for the land acquisition.

In other business, Laurie Byrd, director of a play which won a state theatre contest recently, asked the board for funds needed to attend the South East Theatre Conference, March 4-5 in Orlando, Florida.

Byrd said competition will involve 14 states, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

The winner of that competition will be able to attend a national conference in Michigan in June she added.

Board clerk Michael Neacise said he would discuss possible funds available with Byrd later.

In further business, the board reviewed a letter from the State Board of Health forwarded from Hancock County School System concerning the need to close 16th Section land dumps currently being maintained by the county.

The letter states the dump sites are a health hazard.

The board authorized sending a letter to the school board informing them that the dumps are under the school board's jurisdiction and that the county cannot close the dumps.

Another letter to the school board from Roger Dale Ladner, representative from Beat 3, was endorsed by the board. The letter asked the school board to stop dumping on C. Martin Road, a road in Ladner's beat, and requests the school board use the sanitary land fill dump approximately four miles west of the high school in the buffer zone.

In further business, the board refused to authorize the Port and Harbor Commission's $720 payment to engineering firm Advanced Development Inc. for extra work performed in inspecting a water tank in the Port Bienville Industrial Site.

The firm claimed extra work resulted from more inspections of the water tank when Mid-State Coatings went 38 days over contract time required for the painting.

The Board stated there were no extra inspections; that the same number of inspections are required no matter how long the job took.

Also during the Tuesday meeting, the board:

—Authorized a $319 expenditure for two board members, an architect and an attorney, to attend a 'jail study convention in Boulder Colorado on Feb. 21.

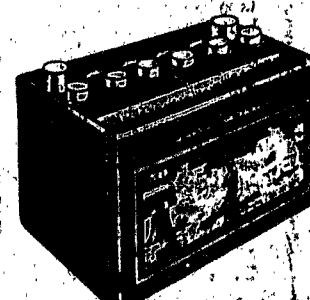

—Approved an approximate 60 acre commercial 16th Section land lease north-east of the Jourdan River to Joe Buccola and Huey Johnston at $1,500 a year.

Approved a 16th Section land lease to Elbert E. Edwards at $128 a year.

—Authorized the additional advertisement for banks. The county currently has holdings in Gulf National Bank and the bank did not submit a bid at the beginning of the year.

—Heard a complaint by John Ladner that the Hancock County Sheriff's Department is overstaffed and overfunded. Ladner stated Harrison County is four times the size of Hancock County and employs only twice the number of deputies. He added Stone County has only two deputies. The board said they would look into the matter.

PRC's Dixie Drawl plans weekly issue

Pearl River Junior College's student newspaper, The Dixie Drawl, will begin weekly publication during the spring semester beginning with the January 19 edition.

Larry L. Stanford, director of public relations at the college and faculty advisor of the newspaper, made the announcement last week at a Monday afternoon staff meeting.

"I think the staff can competently produce a first class publication that will rate exceptionally high at the spring competition of the Mississippi Junior College Press Association," Stanford said.

"PRC's student newspaper has been the most dominate force in junior college publications during the entire decade of the seventies and is currently rated as the number one publication from last year," he added.

The Dixie Drawl will once again be aiming at capturing the prestigious title of Best Overall Newspaper against all other junior colleges in the state.

The weekly Dixie Drawl will offer its readers an expanded coverage of news affecting students, staff, and teachers of the college. "Because our readers are so mobile and possess a keen interest, The Dixie Drawl will be keeping a watchful eye on state and national news that could possibly effect them," Stanford said.

"Although an expanded news format will be adopted, local campus news will still hold top priority with the newspaper," remarked Stanford. "we still realize the importance of good local reporting. Our first commitment will be to the college's Poplarville, Hancock, Hattiesburg and Lamar campuses.

The Dixie Drawl has a history of "firsts" in journalistic accomplishments for junior college publications. In 1973, Pearl River published the first full size newspaper, abandoning the tabloid publications most used by junior colleges across the state. During 1974, the Dixie Drawl released the first four process color picture to ever appear in a junior college newspaper.

In the past nine years The Dixie Drawl has collected 66 state awards, has had 15 state officers serve on the Junior College Press Association staff, and was first overall in 1974, 1975, 1976, 1978, 1980, and placed second in 1977 and 1979.

"We certainly have a big tradition to live up to at the Drawl," remarked Stanford, "but with hard work and dedication and the nerve to try new ideas in bettering our publication, we should fair pretty good at convention time."

Have you ever stopped to think what corn meant to the first American settlers? Without it they would probably have starved, for when the Pilgrims finally reached Plymouth, most of their food stores were either gone or too spoiled to use.

And the crop seeds they had brought from the Old World failed to thrive - had it not been for the Indians showing them how to raise corn as well as how to prepare it, they would not have survived and many of us Americans would not be here today.

Corn, cooked in many, many ways, is an integral part of our Deep South cookery. As a matter of fact, many Southerners consider it a sacrilege, no less, to serve fried chicken (Southern fried chicken, that is, suh and madam) without corn fritters or corn pudding, Southern style of course.

But, for today let's cook up an early American classic, the corn chowder of those early Americans, cooked in a kettle swinging over an open fire.

We do have rather an easier time of it these days, don't we, despite inflation, inflation and more inflation and such? So here's:

EARLY DAYS CORN CHOWDER
6 slices bacon, cooked crisp and crumbled
1 onion, medium to large,

thin-sliced and separated into rings.
2 large potatoes, peeled and diced, enough to make a cup and a half or a bit more
1/2 cup water
1 can cream-style corn (16 to 17 oz.)

Dashes of salt, pepper, and for me, at least, hot pepper sauce

Butter or margarine as needed
After you've cooked, and drained and crumbled the bacon, reserve two or three tablespoons of the drippings in the saucepan and drain off the remainder for whatever you want to do with it (I use mine for seasoning and such).

Add the onion slices, cooking till very lightly browned, then add potato and water and cook over medium heat till the potato dices are tender. Then add the corn and the milk, and salt and pepper cooking till heated through.

Then pour into soup bowls, mugs or cups which you have pre-warmed at least a little. Atop each serving drop some of the crumbled bacon and a generous pat of butter or margarine, and serve with crackers (though I serve even this old dish of New England with - what else, crisp, butter-drenched toasted French bread).

Serves two or four or six, depending upon appetites and whatever else you're serving.

Highway Department initiates economy measures

The Mississippi State Highway Department is curbing maintenance and administrative expenditures due to continually decreasing maintenance funds, department director John Tabb said.

Highway Department

division heads have been requested to cut all out-of-state travel except in extreme situations such as work specified under contract. Each of the six districts has been restricted to the amount of capital outlay for equipment, Tabb said. Emergency purchases must be approved by the director's office and the State Budget Commission.

All positions vacated for 30 days or more and funded with maintenance funds are frozen and will not be filled, the director noted.

Division heads have been requested to hold back on other unnecessary expenditures.

Districts are cutting expenditures now by reducing equipment operation, purchasing only "absolutely necessary" materials, delaying noncritical equipment repair, cutting utility use and not replacing employees who resign or retire, according to Tabb.

Maintenance personnel are performing repairs essential to the traveling public's safety. Repair of potholes and replacement of essential traffic controls have priority.

The highway department had a cash balance in maintenance funds of $604,000

January 1 this year which is already committed to equipment and supplies, as compared to $5.7 million the same date last year, Tabb said.

Motor fuel consumption in this state is down ten percent from last year due to less automobile travel and more small cars on the highway. Inflation is also a factor in the shrinking maintenance funds, Tabb added.

The Highway Department is doing everything it can to continue operating in the black, he said.

Mississippi's 1980 traffic toll down 14 previous year

The Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol reported today that 18 fewer people died on state highways, county roads, and city streets during 1980 than in 1979.

The decline in deaths, Public Safety Commissioner Sidney B. Berry said, came despite an increase in the number of registered motor vehicles in the state and more licensed drivers.

"Increased compliance with state and municipal traffic regulations by the general motoring public, greater driving safety awareness, and conscientious attention to duty by patrol officers at the state, county, and city levels are among the reasons for the decrease in deaths," Berry said.

Reduction in traffic deaths is a primary goal of the troopers of the state highway patrol, Berry said.

The patrol reported a three percent decline in traffic deaths while the number of registered motor vehicles climbed two and a half percent and licensed drivers went up nearly five percent.

"During 1980, 4.2 persons were killed per million miles traveled on Mississippi roads," Berry said, "whereas in 1979, the rate was 4.3."

Berry said there was a two and a half percent increase overall in the number of motorists on Mississippi roads who complied with the national maximum speed limit of 55 miles per hour.

On 1 April 1980 the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol intensified its efforts to reduce excessive speeds on Mississippi's highways. Observers reported today that more drivers on the Mississippi highway system are voluntarily complying with the national speed law designed to save lives and energy, but there remains great room for improvement.

Berry said that cooperation of the motoring public and strict enforcement by all state, municipal, and county law enforcement officers is essential to safe driving on all roads in the state and to reducing the number of needless deaths in traffic accidents.

Money Talk By Norine Barnes

The many-families in Mississippi who currently use a mobile home as their residence-and those who are thinking of doing so-should be aware that an insurance policy has been developed especially for this type of housing, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

In addition to protecting the unit itself, the mobile home policy provides coverage for unscheduled personal property, additional living expense, personal liability and medical payments to others.

Coverage on the mobile home includes parts, equipment and accessories originally built into the structure and forming a permanent part of it.

Also covered are furniture, appliances and equipment furnished by the manufacturer, replacement of same, steps and oil or gas tanks used for heating and cooking.

The mobile home policy excludes coverage for awnings, porches, carports, air conditioners and other structures and equipment that were not part of the mobile home when it was purchased new. These items may be separately described and insured for an additional premium.

Unscheduled personal property coverage applies to personal possessions that may be lost due to theft or damage by the perils listed in the policy. This coverage excludes motorized vehicles and their equipment and accessories, boats, trailers and property pertaining to an insured's business.

If an insured peril renders the premises unfit for occupancy, additional living expense coverage will pay for incurred expenses that exceed those of the normal household budget. Recovery is limited to a maximum of $15 per day for not more than 45 days.

The mobile home policy insures against 17 different perils, including fire, lightning, windstorm, smoke, vandalism, breakage of glass and theft.

Collision coverage may be purchased to protect the mobile home for 30 days while it is being moved to a new location. Because rates may vary depending upon the location of the mobile home, policyholders should promptly advise their insurer when they move.

Section II of the mobile home policy provides protection for personal liability and medical payments to others. Personal liability protects the insured against a lawsuit filed by persons who consider him responsible for the bodily injuries of others, without regard to fault.

The Institute suggests that you may wish to talk with several insurance representatives to find the best value for your insurance dollar.

Ask friends to recommend insurance agents or companies from which they have had good service, or check with several who are listed in the "yellow pages" of your telephone book.

Compare costs, quality, coverages and service; and choose the policy that's right for you.

Check with the Insurance Commissioner's office to determine if certain companies are licensed within the state.

Finally, mobile home dwellers should observe special tire safety precautions:

-Don't park your mobile home too close to another.

-Don't paint the interior with flammable paint or lacquer.

-Don't alter your electrical wiring, heating or LP gas installations yourself.

-Take extra care with heaters and stoves and cigarettes.

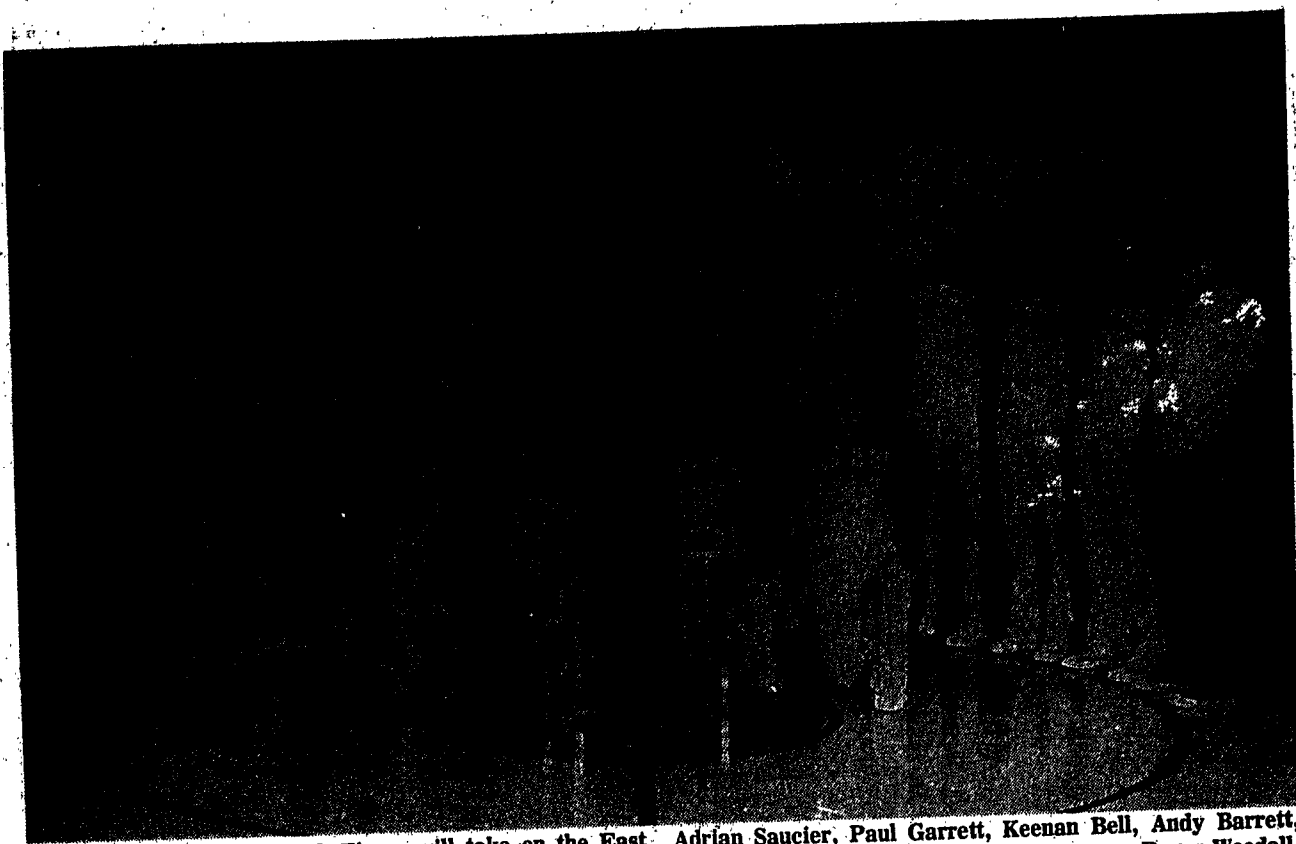

-If you home is not equipped with a smoke detector, have one or more installed.

-Train your family in emergency exit procedures.

EXPORT VALUE

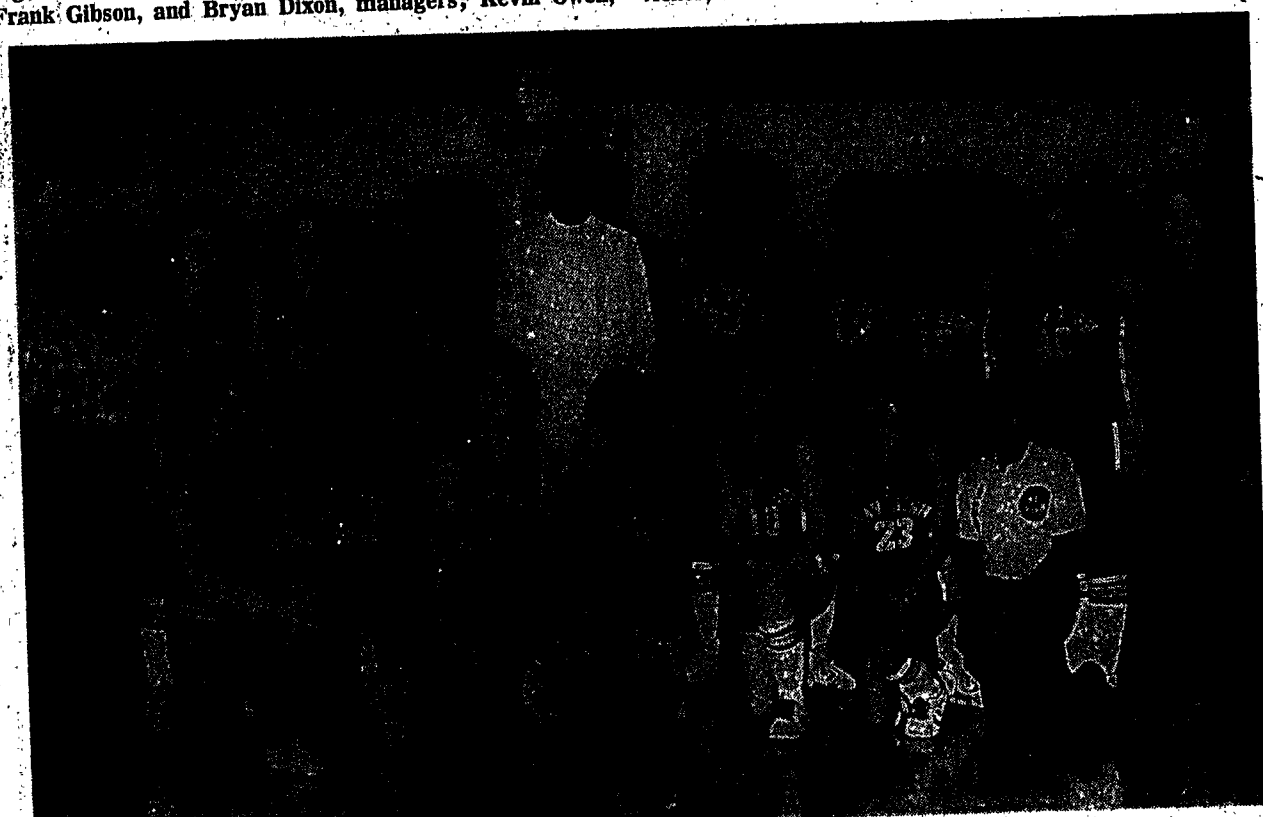

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's projection for a record-high $2 billion in farm exports this year means a 17 percent increase in value over last year's foreign farm trade.

Coaches list Hawks as tourney favorite

By RANDY PONDER

The Bay High Invitational Basketball Tournament enters its second round tonight with host Bay High Tigers taking on the East Central Hornets at 8:45 p.m. St. Stanislaus, the only undefeated team on the coast, is scheduled to play the winner of the Pass Christian-Long Beach game at 7:30 p.m. St. Martin and Vancleave are also slated to play tonight with the tip off at 5 p.m.

"This should be the best tournament we've had in the three years I've been here," Bay High coach Jerry Spell commented.

"We've got some very talented teams entered this year. St. Stanislaus is undefeated and Hancock North Central is always a tough opponent. Even though their record is not that impressive, I think the Hawks have to be considered one of the favorites to win the tournament," Spell concluded.

Coach Steve North of St. Stanislaus echoed the Tiger coaches' opinions.

"People have us picked as the favorites, but we have not played the type of competition the Hawks have," North stated.

"Hancock has lost some games but they were to powerhouses such as Gulfport. The Hawks should be the favorites. They have a good team and an excellent coach. His record speaks for itself," the Rock-A-Chaw coach explained.

Hancock North Central coach Roland Ladner agrees. "We feel like we're ready for this tournament."

"This should be one of the best tournaments Bay High has had, we're coming in with a positive attitude. This is the time of year we usually start playing better ball," Ladner elaborated.

"We're looking forward to maybe playing St. Stanislaus in the finals," the Hawk coach added.

Arcement gives Wildcats overtime opportunity

Outstanding over-time play and a tough defense enabled the PRC Wildcats to defeat the Southwest Bears in a thriller Monday night 92-89.

The win boosted the 'Cats' overall record to 6-13 and 2-5 in conference play. Despite being plagued with shooting problems all season long, the Wildcats managed to match the Bears shot for shot in the second half to put the game into over-time play.

Coach Billy Holmes' Wildcats had been working all last week on their man-to-man defense in anticipation of the Bear offensive attack.

Southwest dominated the first half of play though, with pin-point accuracy from the outside key, to lead the Wildcats 51-42 going into the lockers at intermission.

Early in the second half of action, the Cats began their charge for the win. With a little more than 14 minutes left to play, PRC went ahead 58-57 but from there on, the regulation game was a saw battle. With 2:30 left on the clock, the contest was 79-79, but the Bears pushed ahead 81-79 with 1:14 remaining in regulation play.

Only 30 seconds remained when the Wildcats' Barry Arcement dropped one in to tie the game once again 81-81. A missed free-throw opportunity by the 'Cats, with only one second remaining, put the contest into over-time play.

Pearl River dominated the over-time play with consistent shooting and fierce determination. Only once did the Bears come within two points of the 'Cats, that with 1:00 left on the clock.

Wildcat Renee Brown dropped in the final two points, with eight seconds left on the clock to close out the contest 92-89.

"We played a super game," remarked Coach Billy Holmes. "The boys played as good as they were capable of playing; both the defensive and offensive squads did an excellent job, and everybody executed well. All five of our starters were in double figures, and everybody on the team contributed one way or another."

"It was an excellent game, and I am very pleased with the win," said Holmes.

Renee Brown led the Wildcats in scoring for the night with 28 points, followed by Jeff Gray with 20. John Williams contributed 15 points, Landry Cage 15, and Barry Arcement 10.

Next on the schedule is a home game in the PRC Coliseum with Co-I in January 22.

A strong puncher, Rooks kept spectators wondering no longer when the big day would come when he would get a one-punch KO.

The specials, which will occupy the 8 to 9 p.m. time slot through January 24 and will detail Super Bowls I through XIV, complete with highlight films provided by NFL Films, and interviews with the people involved. The shows are being repeated at midnight each evening.

Interviews with former Green Bay Packer guard Jerry Kramer, former Baltimore Colt Quarterback Johnny Unitas, Pittsburgh Steeler wide receiver Lynn Swann and Steeler owner Art Rooney will be included. Grande, Sal Marchiano and Bob Ley will host the shows on a rotating basis.

Simpson, Maguire, Bud Wilkinson and Terry Hanratty will co-host. Hanratty was involved in Super Bowls IX and X as a Steeler quarterback. The special will include reports from New Orleans, January 22-24.

"These shows will provide a rare opportunity to relive Super Bowls past in one neat, continuing package," Simmons said. "They'll also point out the changes in professional football, from the Lombardi era of the late 1960's to the wide-open offenses and the Steeler domination of the 1970's."

Rebel soph scoring high

There's just something about the orange and blue of the University of Florida that brings out the best in Ole Miss Rebel Cager Cecil Dowell.

Last year, as a freshman, Dowell scored his personal high against the Gators, getting eight points.

This season, he responded down in O'Connell Center in Gainesville with 20 points, 10 of 15 field goals, in a close 74-71 Ole Miss loss last Saturday. His collection of points was a high for this winter for the soph.

Dowell, like most of the basketball players recruited by Bob Weltlich, is a talented, all-round athlete. He led his Bolton (Tenn.) High School team to two Tennessee state championships before accepting Weltlich's offer of a scholarship to Ole Miss.

"Several schools wanted me," the 6-0, 185-pound Arlington, Tenn., native said. "Arkansas, Oklahoma, Memphis State and some junior colleges recruited me. But the main reason I chose Ole Miss was I realized that I would get a lot of playing time. There was a good chance to start and to play here. I also wanted to play in the Southeastern Conference — one of the toughest leagues in the nation."

"In the SEC, you get to play against All-Americans. It's not much fun to play against lesser ability. You won't get any better unless you play against superior talent."

Dowell has the kind of superior talent that most coaches just dream about. He's quick, a good shooter, and plays excellent defense. Improvement in all those areas has led to more playing time for the liberal arts major.

"Cecil's worked really hard in the off-season," Weltlich, the SEC's Coach-of-the-Year last year, said. "He may be as dedicated and hard-working a player as there is in our program. His familiarity with the system, and a year's experience with people like Carlos Clark and Sean Tuohy has benefited him immensely. He is gaining confidence game by game, and that's especially showing up in his shooting the past two or three games. His improvement is really helping our ball club."

Dowell, used primarily as Tuohy's back-up last year, had his high moments as a freshman.

"I guess the biggest thrill of my life was making that shot that beat Tennessee last year in the SEC Tournament," Dowell admitted.

Against the Vols, the 6-0 Dowell was standing among giants when a John Stroud missed shot went up with only four seconds on the clock and the scored tied at 74. Unfortunately, for the Rebs, big Howard Wood of Tennessee came up with the ball.

But just when things looked dim, Dowell knocked the ball out of Wood's hands.

"He brought it down, and I just had my hand right on the ball," Dowell said. "The whole time I had it in my mind that I would shoot the ball if I got it, so I just went up with it."

The rest is history. Dowell's shot went through the hoop, past befuddled Vols, and put Ole Miss in the semi-finals of the tourney against Kentucky.

Dowell, who has shared starting duties with Sean Tuohy at the point guard slot this season, but is now working with him in the backcourt as a tandem, believes that the two work well together.

"We complement each other," Dowell said. "There's no doubt about it, Sean's a great ball-handler, which is my weakness. I'm at my best as a defender and a shooter. I need to work on my passing in the off-season. But together, we combine the elements that our gural play needs."

Brief

Clarence Daniels, a short-distance runner for Ole Miss, captured the 300 meter race at the Magnolia State Track meet held in Jackson over the weekend. Daniels' time was 31.37.

Coach Joe Walker took several Rebel Athletes to the meet.

Don Harrison, another Rebel trackster, captured the shot put by throwing it 55' 6". In addition, former Walker protege, Larry Myricks, who ran for the now-Rebel coach at Mississippi College as a collegian, won the long jump with an effort of 25 feet, 9 3/4 inches.

Bay soccer popularity growing, groups seeking coaches, referees

With the beginning of the second half of the soccer season just two weeks away, several Bay area teams are anxious to get back on the victory path.

In the under 8 age division, the team coached by Dot Standford has a record of four wins and two ties in six games. With two points awarded for each win, and one point for a tie, the team's ten points puts them just two points out of the top spot and in a tie for second place.

Two teams coached by Dusty Rhodes and Bob Shaw stand further back in the standings with records of 2 wins, 4 losses. And the fourth Bay team in the under 8's is just one notch lower with a 1-5 won-lost record.

In the 24 team crowd in the under 10 age group, the five Bay teams are separated by just two points as all five stand in the top half of the standings. The Sharks coached by Paul Montjoy, and the teams coached by Tommy Brooks and Ray Kidd all have 4-2, won-lost records and stand in fourth place. One point is the team coached by Don Everette with three wins and a tie in six games.

And one point lower is Terry Towles' team with a 3-3 record.

The crowd is smaller in the under 12 age group and more spread out. Fred Bowles' team is a second place, just one point out of first, with a 4-1-1 record.

A little further back are the Scrappers coached by Dusty Rhodes with a 3-2-1 record; followed closely by the teams coached by Caglar (2-4-0 record) and Bensabat (1-3-2).

In the under 14 age division the two Bay St. Louis teams occupy the top and bottom spots in the six team division. The Purple Gang has managed only a tie in seven games, while the Blue Demons have suffered only an opening day loss in their seven games to lead the pack.

In a Thanksgiving weekend tournament at Pascagoula, the Blue Demons walked away with the first place medals. And they are ready to make this year's appearance in the state tournament their third in three years.

The state tournament will be held in Jackson this year on the final weekend in April. Several Bay teams are pointed in that direction with at least six games remaining on the schedule in the second half for all teams.

With 17 teams and over 300 players involved in the soccer program this year, soccer has become the second largest sport in the Bay area.

As the program continues to expand, coaches and referees are greatly needed. Anyone interested in coaching a team in the under 8 age division or in helping out in any of the age groups is asked to contact Bob Shaw. (467-2402). And anyone wanting to become a soccer referee should call Tom Demboski (467-4773).

Lady Rebels face stiffest challenge

Ole Miss, with an 11-5 mark for the basketball season, will face its stiffest challenge of the year Saturday when defending national champ Old Dominion arrives in Oxford for a 1:30 p.m. game at Tad Smith Coliseum.

The Lady Monarchs, with a 12-0 mark this year, have a 39-game winning streak going and are ranked second in the nation in the latest poll.

The game marks only the second meeting between the two teams. Old Dominion won the first game 79-58 in Norfolk, Virginia.

Ole Miss, winner of nine of its last thirteen games, has lost only one game at Tad Smith Coliseum in six outings this season but Lady Rebel coach Van Chancellor has a lot of respect for the Lady Monarchs.

The world's record for 60 home runs in a 154-game season still belongs to Babe Ruth; so does the record for the most long hits (119).

"We'll have to do more than just go out and play hard to hope to beat Old Dominion," Chancellor said. "We have had good effort in every game, but we're going to have to play intelligent basketball to have a chance to win."

"This season has been a step forward and then a step backward," Chancellor continued. "We have talented players, but we haven't played with a lot of consistency. We've got to stop making so many turnovers and committing so many fouls."

Freshman Sandra Helms continues to lead the Lady Rebels in scoring with a 12.1 points per game average while senior Carol Ross is adding 9.5 points per outing.

Anne Donovan, a 6-8 sophomore center, leads Old Dominion in scoring with a 28.3 points per game average. She also leads the nation in rebounding with more than 10 per game and her 28.3 points per game is second best in the country.

Wildlife Federation lists animals in 1980 headlines

Donkeys and elephants may have dominated the nation's headlines in the election year of 1980, but they got a lot of competition from some wacky wildlife and domestic animals, according to the National Wildlife Federation's annual report on animals in the news.

A dandy lion that charmed its captors in New York City, a squadron of seagulls that dove-bombed a parking lot in Maryland, and an English bull whose romantic antics fattered a $352,000 lawsuit were among the birds and beasts that vied with the political critters for public attention.

Most of the news made by animals was amusing, but a few deaths occurred where humans exposed to wildlife failed to take adequate safety precautions, the NWF roundup showed.

The year's top story, appropriately, involved the king of beasts. It began when Albert Sima and two friends returning from a pigeon race encountered a 200-pound lion outside a graveyard in Queens, a borough of New York City.

When Sima, a 29-year-old meat distributor, gingerly approached the big cat, it greeted him by rubbing its body against his legs.

Then, when Sima opened a door of his pick-up truck, the lion hopped in.

Predictably, the police refused to believe Sima after he drove home and called to report his find.

When, after several calls,

NWF Cartoon by William Coulter

the police finally came, the lion climbed onto the front seat of their patrol car for a ride to the Bronx Zoo.

But there was no den at the zoo for Henry, as he was now known to a growing circle of friends. The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had to step in and find a place for him in a private zoo at Scotch Plains, N.J., where he now entertains visitors and plays an occasional charity benefit.

The police never located Henry's owner. ASPCA Director John Kullberg called him "just about the friendliest wild animal I've ever met."

Considerably less friendly were the seagulls at Cambridge, Md., who, apparently in protest against a parking lot in the midst of their habitat, bombarded the lot with oyster shells. Several car roofs were dented. In another apparent protest, 4,000 dolphins massed around the Japanese island of Iki and forced fishing boats back into port. Observers speculated that the dolphins were angered by the fact that Iki fishermen had just netted and killed 200 of their number.

Several bull stories made news. In one of them an English Holstein named Arab was placed on a regimen of total abstinence after over-exercising himself while servicing 29 heifers from Wales.

But the plan went awry. When several cows from a neighboring farm wandered into his pasture and Arab again turned romantic, he destroyed his usefulness as a stud, his owner charged in a $352,000 lawsuit against the neighboring farmer.

A judge ruled that the damage was done during Arab's first orgy and awarded his owner only $347.

A shocking story came from Tokyo, where a crow got tangled in a power cable network, causing a short circuit which halted 20 high speed trains for more than an hour. The crow was electrocuted.

In Bangladesh, wildlife got the upper hand when nearly a thousand hissing, poisonous snakes took over a town, diverting traffic and sending people scurrying for cover. The vipers' nest had been disturbed by a road repair crew.

In Buena Vista, Cal., a burro named Billy Carter won $1,200 and the second Annual Triple Crown Burro Race by covering 25 rugged miles in three hours and 20 minutes. In Huron, S.D., a slithering creature named Billy Carter won a "book" worm race at the local library. His triumph proved short lived when a judge accidentally stepped on him.

Does a cockatoo have the right to remain silent? A judge in Norfolk, Mass., ruled affirmatively when Jane Messina sued Debby's Pet Land for triple damages because a $1,200 white sulfur-crested cockatoo named Sheba that she bought from the store refused to talk.

A veterinarian testified that some birds, "no matter how much time you spend with them, won't talk." Dismissing the case, Judge Vincent Brogna agreed: "They're like humans."

Convinced that cockroaches are also like people, a team of scientists at Emory University in Atlanta trained some roaches to run on a treadmill with weights attached to their legs.

The purpose wasn't to lose weight, but to learn more about failure of the metabolic process in ailments such as muscular dystrophy and multiple sclerosis.

Nature dealt some terrible blows to wildlife, as when the eruption of Mt. St. Helens in Washington State wiped out at least 1.5 million game birds and mammals and an estimated 11 million fish.

So did man. Oil spills in Maryland killed 40,000 fish and a sewage discharge from a Virginia Coal Plant destroyed 43,000 more.

Five million honey bees suffocated in the baggage compartment of a 727 jet on a flight from Arizona to Canada.

But the worst stories involving wildlife and humans came from Glacier National Park, where three people were clawed to death by grizzly bears—bringing to six the number killed by grizzlies in the park's 71 year history; from Perth, Australia, where a 12-foot long saltwater crocodile killed a late night swimmer; and from Dallas, where an eight-foot-long python "escaped" from its aquarium, slithered into the crib of a sleeping 7-month-old baby girl and crushed her to death.

In a grim counterpoint to that story, an 18-month-old baby girl in Melbourne, Australia, killed a venomous 8-inch snake by biting its head off.

Wild animals tangled with the U.S. Postal Service in two areas. National Wildlife's third annual survey found. A pieved possum was found in a Front Royal, Va., mailbox, where someone had dropped him, apparently as a joke. Not amused, the possum chewed or otherwise defaced about 40 letters.

Another joker, in November, put a tiny warbler in a mailbox headed south from New York. It got only as far as Philadelphia, but a Kennelbuck, Me., woman talked Delta Air Lines into flying a shivering robin all the way to Florida.

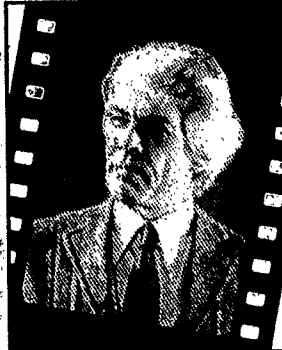

In Tempe, Ariz., the jogging craze got some new participants—a herd of pigs—when Arizona State University researchers decided to test the effects of that sport and high fat diets on heart problems.

Prodded along by the researchers, the porkers were ordered to jog about two miles a day. They showed some striking similarities to humans.

"They burn up the track for about the first lap, said Ross Consaul, one of the researchers. "After that, most of them need some encouragement."

Corporation files first libel suit against environmentalists

Six conservation, consumer, and civic groups have gone to the aid of a West Virginia environmentalist and two organizations he heads, all of which have been sued for libel by the DLM Coal Company of Upshur County, W. Va. The case marks the first time a corporation has sued an environmental group for libel.

The National Wildlife Federation, the West Virginia Wildlife Federation (an NWF affiliate), the American Civil Liberties Union, Consumers Union, the League of Women Voters of the U.S., and the Natural Resources Defense Council have filed a "friend-of-the-court" brief in the Supreme Court of Appeals at Charleston, W. Va., asking the court to dismiss DLM's libel suit on the grounds that it would violate the defendants' rights to free speech.

A judgement against them would also "impose liability on the defendants for exercising their First Amendment rights to petition the government for redress of grievances," according to the brief filed by intervening groups.

DLM filed its suit last July against Rick Webb and two central West Virginia environmental groups he heads, Braxton Environmental Action Programs and Mountain Stream Monitors (MSM). DLM is seeking $200,000 in damages for a publication of an MSM newsletter and for contacts Webb had with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Department of Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM).

The MSM newsletter, called "Confluence," contained an editorial with a map captioned "Strip mining on the Buckhannon River watershed has destroyed over seven miles of native brook trout streams and jeopardized the entire river." The DLM lawsuit says this sentence is libelous.

Webb's letter to the OSM requested that an inspection of DLM's property be made to determine whether the company had violated the Surface Mining Act. Webb also asked EPA to investigate whether DLM was in compliance with the Clean Water Act. Because of resulting investigations and inspections by federal officials, DLM claims it was injured by having to spend time notifying its stockholders and the Securities and Exchange Commission that the company was the focus of an "environmental proceeding."

In reading "Confluence," says the brief, "it is impossible to discern even a sharp criticism of the coal industry generally, much less any direct attack of any particular individual or company. Instead, in considered and moderate language, the editorial expresses hope as to the future responsibility of West Virginia mine operators."

If the editorial in "Confluence" is considered to be libelous, then all publications which discuss issues of public and political interest—including daily newspapers—will have to censor themselves," said Norman Dean, attorney for the National Wildlife Federation.

Concerning Webb's letters to EPA and OSM, the brief notes that the Surface Mining Act authorizes any citizen to provide information to OSM concerning possible violations of the regulations and to request an investigation. And under the Clean Water Act, any interested party may submit information to the EPA in order to initiate enforcement proceedings.

"If the DLM suit is allowed to go to trial," Dean emphasized, "then public-interest groups everywhere—in fact, all concerned citizens—will be put on notice that when they try to participate in the government's regulatory processes, or whenever they publicly advocate positions on nationally or regionally important issues, they risk being involved in potentially lengthy and expensive libel suits."

Mushrooms Add Elegance To Macaroni and Cheese

Here is an off-the-shelf supper dish that's delicious and quickly prepared. It starts out with packaged macaroni and cheese, adds extra protein with a can of tuna, extra color with a little chopped pimiento, and a touch of elegance with a can of sliced mushrooms. Spoon the mixture onto broiled tomatoes or broccoli spears, and in less than a half-hour you've got a nourishing supper dish—with a touch of elegance.

MUSHROOM MACARONI AND CHEESE
1 package (14 oz.) deluxe-type macaroni and cheese dinner
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
1 can (3 to 4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
1/4 cup chopped pimiento
2 medium-sized ripe tomatoes, cut into 8 slices
Preheat broiler to hot. Prepare macaroni and cheese according to package directions. Stir in tuna, mushrooms and pimiento; cover and set aside. Place tomato slices on a baking pan. Broil tomatoes 6 inches from heat source until cooked through, about 5 minutes. For each serving place 2 tomato slices on a dinner plate; spoon macaroni and cheese mixture over top. Serve with green beans, if desired.
YIELD: 4 portions.

FISHIN' TIPS

from... Tom Mann

FROM THE MAIL BAG
One reader of this column wrote: "Tom, I'm puzzled. When I fish on a really dark night I know there is no light in the water. And where there's no light there can be no sight. So, how do bass find my plastic worm when they can't even see it?"

Now there's a thinking fisherman and he's put his finger on one of the truly amazing senses of a bass, its sonar system. Next time you observe a bass, notice the fine lateral line along the center of each side, from gill to tail.

This is filled with sensory nerves which can detect movement up to about 75 feet. When something as streamlined as a plastic worm is moved by a fisherman, it gives off pressure waves which the bass feels through tiny neuromasts, or nerve endings.

Not only can it tell how far away that worm is but it also can detect which way it is headed and intercept it. Wiggling lures, or spinners like a Little George, are much easier to detect because they give off greater pressure waves.

So, when fishing at night, or in dingy water where visibility is limited to a few inches, think sound in your lures. Use those that give off a pulsation you can feel in your rod hand. You're bound to catch more bass because you make it easier for the bass to find your lure.

Lady Wildcats building on 11-4, 6-1 conference

All eleven Pearl River College Lady Wildcats scored Monday night as the PRC girls strengthened their lead in the south division with a methodical 80-61 win over the Lady Bears from Southwest in Poplarville.

The Billy Holmes-led girls are now 10-4 overall and 6-1 in the conference and have put together six straight wins. The Lady Cats are exactly half way through the 14-game conference schedule.

Southwest's only threat of the night came toward the end of the first half of play. Marilyn Cook hit a jumper from the left side to give the Lady Bears a short-lived 25-24 advantage. After that spurt, the PRC girls pulled away to a 41-34 intermission break.

In the second half of play the Lady Wildcats connected on 19 of 23 free throws, 20 of 26 for the night, enroute to the easy win.

Faith Harrell netted 16 points, with Glenda Gardner, Jennifer Ramshur, and Tedora Hookfin getting 10 each. Lawana Johnson tallied 8 for the night with Nita Boudreaux and Leslie Williamson sinking six.

Other Lady Wildcats scoring were Rosemary Loftin 2, Shelly Deadeaux 4, Lisa Douglas 3, and Brenda Young 5.

Last Friday the Lady

Wildcats picked up a non-conference win over LSU-A from Alexandria, La. It was another easy night as the PRC girls posted an 80-59 decision. Lawana Johnson scored 25 in that contest with Tedora Hookfin getting 21, and Faith Harrell and Leslie Williamson collecting a dozen each.

PRC 67 - UTICA 61

To have a winning team takes a unified group effort and that's exactly what Billy Holmes got from his group of Lady Cats here Tuesday night against the Lady Bulldogs from Utica.

Without freshman starter Shelly Deadeaux of Hancock North Central and minus the usual consistent touch of starters Jennifer Ramshur, Faith Harrell and Glenda Gardner, Holmes turned to his bench against Utica and came up with stellar performances from Lisa Douglas, Nita Boudreaux, Leslie Williamson and Brenda Young for a big south division win.

The second half 67-61 comeback win left the Lady Wildcats alone at the top of the division.

"I can't tell you how pleased I am with this win," said Holmes. "It showed me how much character this team really has."

Trailing 39-33 at the half and by a 55-42 count with 11:28 left in the contest, the Lady Wildcats continued to fight back for a dramatic six point victory. The turn-around came when sophomore Lawana Johnson, who gets better and tougher each contest, took control for a layup that eventually turned into a three point play. Lisa Douglas then hit two of her six for six free throws in the last twenty minutes and the PRC team was back in the race.

Williamson popped a long shot from the left side and Johnson sank another freebie and the difference was only five. Faith Harrell hit a basket and Williamson was sure from the strip for two more counters and a 58-57 advantage.

Johnson scored three more points and Williamson and Boudreaux combined to sink four more free throws for the Lady Cats 67-61 win.

Boudreaux was the leading scorer with 16 points and Johnson netted 11. Williamson finished with 10, Young 8, Hookfin 7, and Douglas 6.

Dedeaux was unable to play and may miss several games. She checked into a hospital last week for a complete physical.

"We have a team which does not mind taking up the slack for each other," Holmes said. "With an attitude like this we will continue to win."

The Atlanta station broadcasts locally by the Hancock Community Cable

Forward Al Wood heads the North Carolina roster, having rated as a top All-America candidate in his senior year with an average of 19 points per game last season. He was also the fourth leading scorer on the 1980 U.S. Olympic Team.

The Wake Forest deacons, led by the phenomenal scoring of All-ACC guard Frank Johnson, sports a frontcourt with the ability to score an average 37 points per game. Johnson is joined by returnees Mike Helms and Kenny Vaughns.

On Jan. 24 at 8 p.m., SuperStation WTBS will telecast another great basketball rivalry when the Clemson Tigers take on the Duke Blue Devils.

The Tigers went 23-9 last season, driving all the way to the finals of the NCAA West Regional, only to fall before the onslaught of UCLA.

Center Larry Nance, the ACC's top rebounding forward last season, and forward Fred Gilliam, Clemson's best shooter, will be joined by freshman Clarke Bynum, the most heavily-recruited player ever to attend Clemson.

The Duke Blue Devils have a new coach, Mike Krzyzewski, who comes to Duke in the wake of last season's stunning victory over Maryland in the final game of the ACC Championship.

Coal, wood burning stove safety urged

The use or misuse of wood and coal burning stoves will result in an estimated 14,000 to 17,000 residential fires and 115 to 150 deaths this year, says the U.S. Consumer product Safety Commission.

"In the midst of the winter cold, consumers need to know the causes of these fires and how they can be prevented," a commission spokesman reports.

"First, back to the beginning. Improper installations of the stoves account for the majority of the fires. If the consumer installed the stove himself and never had it inspected, it would be worth the trouble to check the installation against manufacturer's instructions and local building codes. Most fire departments will inspect the installation of wood and coal burning stoves free-of-charge," the spokesman explains.

Primarily, improper installations involve:

—Clearance between the stove and combustibles;

—Installation of the chimney connector where it passes through a combustible wall, including the appropriate 'thimble' or collar to protect the wall;

—Inappropriate chimney connectors and chimneys for the kind of stove that is used. Improper operation of the stove, in a variety of ways, is the next factor causing fires and injuries. These incidents include:

—Placing combustibles, such as a chair, too close to the stove;

—Placing flammable liquids too close to the stove;

—The use of flammable liquids to kindle a fire; —Overloading of the stove leading to operation beyond design limits;

—The ignition of fabrics during loading, unloading, cleaning or use of the stove;

Contact burns received from hot surfaces of the stove.

"Finally, the wood or coal stove can't be installed and forgotten. Lack of maintenance closely follows as the third cause of fires relating to this heat source," the spokesman notes.

"Annual inspection of the stove for cracks and the chimney for creosote deposits is the absolute minimum maintenance requirement."

Even more frequent inspections of the chimney are highly recommended," the spokesman says.

"Creosote is a dark, sticky, tar-like substance which collects in the chimney. The creosote can catch fire and burn violently throughout the chimney sometimes catching a house on fire," the spokesman reports.

"Any time the chimney shows excessive soot, and creosote build-up, the chimney should be cleaned. Contact the commission, a local wood stove dealer or local Cooperative Extension Service for detailed information on procedures to clean the chimney," the spokesman suggests.

For additional written information, contact the commission at 1330 West Peachtree Street, Northwest, Atlanta, Ga. 30309, or (404) 881-2231.

30,000 Mississippi kids in food program

State Superintendent of Education Dr. Charles Holladay recently released figures on the number of children participating in the child care food program in Mississippi.

"Currently, there are 30,000 children taking part in this program which is jointly operated by the State Department of Education and the U.S. Department of Agriculture," he said.

"Child care centers and day care homes may serve children breakfast, lunch, dinner, plus a mid-morning and mid-afternoon snack," Explained John Walker, assistant director of the state's Division of Administration and Finance.

"Under the program, Mississippi public and non-profit private child care centers and day care homes are reimbursed for part, or in some cases, for all the costs involved in serving children nutritious meals that meet federal requirements," Walker reported.

"When Mississippi began the program in 1969, it served children in three child care centers and day care homes. Since then, the number participating has grown to approximately 500 centers," Walker said.

"But we know there are approximately 600 centers and homes which are potentially eligible but not yet enrolled. We want to make sure they know about the help that's available," he explained.

"Child care centers may join the program independently or under the auspices of a sponsoring organization. Day care homes join the program only under the auspices of sponsoring organizations such as local government agencies, churches, community service agencies or other private non-profit organizations," Walker said.

"To qualify for participation in the program, child care centers and day care homes must be licensed or approved by state or local authorities," he added.

For more information on who is eligible and how to apply, contact J. H. Walker, Child Care Food Program, Division of Administration and Finance, State Department of Education, P. O. Box 771, Jackson, Miss. 39205 or call Clarence Lovelady (601) 354-6916.

Navy ocean survey unit commissioning set Friday

USNS Harkness

Commissioning ceremonies establishing a coastal hydrographic survey unit, the second of its type in the Navy are set for 10 a.m. Friday at the Seabee Center in Gulfport. The new unit will be under operational control of the Naval Oceanographic Office at NSTL in Hancock County. Oceanographic Unit Five will be one of two such coastal survey groups in the Navy and will embark aboard USNS HARKNESS when it arrives in Gulfport in March. The ship and her launches are prepared to conduct coastal surveys essential to the mapping and charting process. Precise electronic transmitters ashore enable the crew of the launch to receive signals while underway and determine exact position. Once the position is known the depth of the water is accurately determined by a highly sensitive echo sounder in the boat's hull. Rear Admiral Ross N. Williams, director of the Naval Oceanography Division in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and the oceanographer of the Navy will be guest speaker at the commissioning ceremony. Captain John R. McDonnell, commander Naval Oceanography Command, headquartered at NSTL, will be the master of ceremonies. Oceanographic Unit Five was originally established and assigned to HARKNESS in 1971 and conducted surveys in the Aegean and Black Seas. The unit later surveyed the approaches to the Suez Canal prior to its re-opening in 1975, and was commended for its work by the Government of Egypt.

On return to the United States in 1979, both the HARKNESS and the Oceanographic Unit were put in reserve status to the present time. The oceanographic unit is staffed by six officers and 54 enlisted personnel and is augmented by a 12 man helicopter detachment, a 12 man detachment from the Navigational Aids Support Unit at Gulfport, and a small contingent of Marines. Oceanographic Unit Five is commanded by Lieutenant Commander Gary M. Davis.

Reading convention slated in Biloxi

The 10th annual Mississippi Reading Association's convention, Jan. 30-31 at the Royal d'Iberville Hotel in Biloxi, will feature three speakers, 42 discussion sessions and several school visitations. One keynote speaker, Dr. Dan Fader, author of 'Hooked on Books,' will speak at a special morning session at 9:30 Jan. 30 in the East Ballroom of the Royal d'Iberville.

The morning session with Fader is sponsored by the reading association and the University of Southern Mississippi for state educators and students, says MRA president and USM Professor Dr. Eleanor Noble. Tickets for this special address entitled 'Literacy, Family and Teachers All Alone' are available in USM's Reading Center on the Hattiesburg Campus and at the Royal d'Iberville in Biloxi.

Fader, who developed a program for bringing paperback books into the classroom in order to get children reading, will speak at the first general session of the convention Friday on 'Reading and Writing as Ritual Acts,' a university spokesman notes. "A professor of English at the University of Michigan, Fader has served as a consultant to the National Endowment for the Humanities, the British House of Commons and the United States Senate to name a few groups," the spokesman reports.

At the second general session Saturday morning Dr. Nancy Santeusano will present ideas to motivate reading. She is a senior author of reading programs for Harcourt, Brace and Javanovich, as well as an elementary principal in Lynnfield, Mass. At a Saturday luncheon Dr. Lacy Marcotte, professor at Nichols State University in Thibodaux, La. will be the featured speaker. He is a member of the International Reading Association's Board of Directors.

Public invited to view 'Sermons From Science'

An unusual scientific demonstration has been slated by Chaplain Maj. Gary Barber of Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi.

'Sermons from Science' will be presented live on stage at Keesler's Welch Theater for four nights - Feb. 6-9 at 8:30 p.m. "Demonstrations by Dean C. Ortnier will show a piece of hand held wood set afire by one million volts of electricity, a frozen shadow, music on a laser beam, a flashlight that talks, a stammering machine, a cry that can shatter glass, liquid light from cold chemicals, and eyes that see in total darkness," a base spokesman explained this week.

"Entertaining over five million people internationally acclaimed 'Sermons from Science' was a standing-room-only attraction at the Seattle, New York, Montreal, and Spokane World's Fairs," the spokesman reported. All military and Gulf Coast residents are invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

He combs his hair straight down at the side, hikes his shirt up to his chest, oscillates his belly and snorts like a pig. It's maniacal Bill Murray, the wacky "Nurd" from "Saturday Night Live." (On HBO this month in "Meatballs.") Murray's outrageous impressions are based on the art of carefully observing people in all walks of life — and on intense study at Chicago's Second City Workshop. His favorite observation post is the street, but now his popularity gets in the way — people stare back at him! What does he look for? Everything from bag ladies to bas-set hounds. "That's all there is — men, women and animals," he says. "And you can't always do animal humor. You got to get into that human stuff, too."

Good roles don't come easily, even to Hollywood stars. For Richard Dreyfuss, now appearing on HBO in Close Encounters of the Third Kind: Special Edition, the leading part of the power/repairman who sights a UFO was one he never thought he'd get. Writer/director Steven Spielberg created the character for an actor much older than Dreyfuss. But, after directing him in Jaws, Spielberg asked Dreyfuss to read the sci-fi script. "As soon as I finished it," says Dreyfuss, "I rushed over to his office and told him it was the best script I'd ever read, and I wished to God I was ten years older." By then, I really wanted the part." So in true Hollywood style, Spielberg rejuvenated his leading character. Dreyfuss fit the bill, and the role was his!

From 1953 to 1968 Audrey Hepburn (on HBO this month in Sidney Sheldon's Bloodline) was one of the world's highest-paid movie actresses. Winner of an Oscar and countless international awards, the graceful lady remains a show business legend. "While most people simply have nice manners, Audrey has authentic charm and class," declares Alfred Lunt, who directed her Tony-winning Broadway performance in "Ondine." Hepburn modestly credits others for her success: "I think the movies I made left a pretty strong impression because of the big directors (Wilder, Wilder, Zinneman, Cukor, Huston) I was lucky enough to work for." She continues, "People associate me with a time when movies were pleasant, when women wore pretty dresses in films and you heard beautiful music. Now people are frightened by the movies." Even in the thriller Bloodline, Audrey adds a delicate touch of class to the victimized woman she portrays.

All soybean producers are invited to attend this meeting.

PLANT A GARDEN

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says retail prices for fruits and vegetables will rise eight percent this year. That should be enough to convince you that your garden will be more important in 1981 than ever before.

To have a successful garden, plant where it will receive full sun and is close to a source of water. We all remember too well what happened last year.

Take a soil sample for testing as soon as possible. Add lime if the tests call for it. Almost 60 percent of last year's garden soil samples showed a need for lime.

Plan your garden size according to your needs. A garden 40 by 50 feet (2,000 square feet) is enough for a family of four.

Start early to locate seed of recommended varieties. Order what won't be available locally. Our office has a list of varieties recommended for this area.

Order seed for your fall garden along with spring and summer seed. Remember, there are 90 to 110 good gardening days after Aug. 1. Plant according to recommended planting dates. Too early is as bad as too late. For more information, come by our office and ask for a copy to the Extension Garden Table.

TRANSPLANTS

If you want to plant fruit or nut trees later this winter or early spring, take a soil sample now and have it analyzed for pH and fertilizer requirements. Most fruit and nut trees grow best at pH of 6.5. Dig a hole large enough and deep enough to permit setting the tree without bending or crowding the roots. Prune roots of new plants only if they are needed to remove damaged, dead or exceptionally long roots.

Place loose topsoil in the bottom of the hole. Set the tree upright in the hole at the depth it was growing in the nursery. Then fill the hole about two-thirds full with good topsoil. Finish filling the hole with water to pack the soil, then finish with more soil after the water soaks in. Don't apply fertilizer at this time.

After transplanting, stake and tie the tree, wrap the trunk and mulch with three to five inches of organic mulch to insure a better chance of survival.

New Orleans symphony sets solo competition

The first annual Oratorio Soloist Competition of the New Orleans Philharmonic Orchestra will be conducted by preliminary tape recordings and live finals will be on April 18.

"The tape submitted must begin with the appropriate solo from the Tuba Mirum movement of the Mozart Requiem, plus solo passages from Verdi's Requiem and other oratorio selections of the applicant's choice," said symphony spokesman Bette Moore this week.

"The contest is open to sopranos, altos, tenors and basses who must be available for the May 4 and 5 performances of the Mozart Requiem, as well as for a possible third performance on May 6, 1982. Winners will also receive a $1,000 prize," Moore explained.

"Applicants must be at least 21 years of age and reside in the Gulf Coast Region of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. No professional experience is required, applicants must have some vocal training, musical background and artistic aptitude," she stated.

"Preliminaries will be judged by Chairman Dr. Larry D. Wyatt, Dr. Raquel Cortina, Arthur Cosenza, Mrs. Nolan C. Kammer and Francis L. Monachino on the basis of a tape cassette accompanied by a $10 entry fee, an application form and a personal photograph. Finalists, who will be judged by Maestro Philippe Entremont and associate conductor Andrew Massey will be notified by April 1 and will compete in New Orleans April 18," Moore added.

Further details are available from the symphony office, Suite 909, 200 Carondelet St., New Orleans, La. 70130, or by phone (504) 524-0044.

Paralegal Alliance of Louisiana and is president of Ludwig and Associates, Inc., believed to be the first paralegal corporation in the United States," the UNO spokesman reported this week.

She will also serve as a member of UNO's paralegal faculty along with other members of the New Orleans legal community, Orleans Criminal District Judge Jerome M. Winsberg, Louisiana Representative Ron Fauchaux and Attorneys Frank B. Williams Jr. and Fred L. Herman Esq.

Initial courses, their dates and instructors are: Introduction to Legal Concepts and Paralegal Skills at 7:30-9:45 p.m., Jan. 26-May 25, by Ludwig; Criminal Justice at 6-8 p.m., Jan. 27-May 19, by Winsberg; Legal Research and Memorandum Writing at 4:50-7 p.m., Jan. 28-May 20 by Williams; Trial Preparation and Assistance at 7:30-9:45 p.m., Jan. 28-May 20, by Herman; and Legislative Law and Procedure at 7:30-9:45 p.m., Jan. 29-May 21, by Fauchaux.

"All classes will be at UNO's Downtown Center except Winsberg's classes which will be at his courtroom in the Orleans Parish Criminal Courts building," the spokesman noted.

Ludwig said there has been a growing demand in recent years for professionally trained paralegals to reduce the workload of attorneys; adding that anyone meeting admission requirements may enroll for a particular course or may work toward the paralegal certificate, awarded upon successful completion of seven courses.

"Admission requirements are a high school diploma or equivalency and three years experience in some phase of the legal profession, or a college degree, or sponsorship by an employer and exhibition of maturity and intellectual ability," the spokesman said. Main-in registrations being accepted until the beginning of classes.

For further information, advising and interviews, call Ludwig at 523-6859.

Learning disabled group in January member drive

Hancock County Chapter of Mississippi Association of Children with Learning Disabilities met Monday with Dr. James Wold as the guest speaker.

Wold discussed auditory problems of children with learning disabilities and how they can be overcome with the help of the parents, teachers and the students themselves, according to Marion Dailey, chapter president.

The chapter is conducting a January membership drive. "Anyone wanting to join this organization can do so by contacting Marion Dailey, chapter president, at 255-9267; Ms. Joyce Ladner, membership chairperson, at 255-1101; or Ms. Louis Abrams at 255-7191, Hancock North Central School.

Anyone interested in the learning disabled should become a part of this group and we always urge the public to attend our meetings, Dailey said.

The chapter now has a shelf in the Hancock County Public Library in Bay St. Louis with tapes, books, and magazines that can help anyone interested in the learning disabled understand their disabilities.

For more information, contact the chapter president at 255-9267.

Doctor cautions elderly on body heat loss danger

A University of Mississippi Medical Center physician says winter may claim lives among the elderly not only from the temperature raising illnesses like flu and pneumonia, but from hypothermia - abnormally low body temperature.

Dr. Cherie Long, assistant professor of family medicine, and developer of the geriatric segments of the Department of Family Medicine curriculum, says hypothermia isn't confined to extremely cold climates. "For certain people, usually those over 65, a gradual loss of body heat can occur at temperatures as high as 60 or 65 degrees Fahrenheit."

Accurate figures on the number of deaths caused by accidental hypothermia are unavailable, both in Mississippi and elsewhere. "An autopsy might note, for instance, that death was due to a heart attack, which would be true," Dr. Long said. "The internally cold temperature slows the flow of oxygen to all vital body tissue, including the heart. Unless a person were found dead in an extremely cold place with little protection, most physicians would not list hypothermia as the cause of death."

Figures gathered in Great Britain over the past 25 years, do indicate that 10 percent of the over-65 population is susceptible to accidental hypothermia. Some conditions and life styles make some people more vulnerable. A 70-year old who plays tennis regularly isn't a likely candidate both because of the physical activity and social contacts, Dr. Long explained.

But a person who lives alone and isn't able to move around well, is at risk, especially if the house isn't heated adequately. If an elderly person falls and spends several hours on a cold floor the body temperature could easily fall below 96 degrees, she said.

Many people over 65 have trouble regulating their body temperature. "They're simply not aware that they're cold," Dr. Long said. An underactive thyroid, stroke, severe arthritis and Parkinson's disease, or alcoholism may all blunt the body's response to cold.

Drugs commonly prescribed for anxiety, depression and nausea can do the same. And some otherwise healthy older people, for reasons no one understands, just cannot regulate their temperature.

"We saw the same problem during last summer's heat wave. Most of the heat stroke victims were senior citizens who lived alone. They stayed in a closed-up house, while the temperature soared, and they never felt hot," Dr. Long said.

Normally when a person feels cold, he or she takes steps to get warm. They bundle up, move around, and shiver. The muscle activity from shivering and moving raises body temperature.

Dr. Long recommends that indoor temperatures be kept no lower than 65 degrees in homes where old people live. Those who are ill or cannot move around well may require higher temperatures.

Other suggestions include: dressing warmly and eating enough food during the day to maintain body heat; sleeping warmly because hypothermia can begin during sleep; asking a physician if the drugs he or she is prescribing can affect the control of body temperature; and staying in contact with other people who can call for help if needed.

Hypothermia can be gradual, and its warning signals should be heeded, Dr. Long said. There may be a change in appearance or behavior during cold weather. Speech may be slurred and breathing slow and shallow.

The lower the temperature, the closer the victim will be to unconsciousness. Blood pressure drops and the pulse is weak.

"If the temperature is below 95 or does not register on an oral thermometer, it should be checked with a rectal thermometer. If the temperature is still below 95 or does not register, call a doctor or an ambulance immediately," she advises.

"Keep the person warm while you wait for help. If the victim is alert he should be given hot food and drink, but nothing alcoholic. Breathing warm mist can help warm the internal organs."

But she cautions against warming the surface of the body too quickly. "Rubbing a person's limbs causes the blood vessels to open wider and more heat escapes."

"Our climate in Mississippi isn't usually associated with deaths from cold," Dr. Long points out. "But with steadily rising fuel costs, the persons most vulnerable to hypothermia may be the ones who can least afford to heat their homes adequately."

Ag Affairs

INTERNATIONALISM AND U.S. AG

American agriculture has gone international.

American farmers were in New Orleans last week - some 7,000 of them - attending the 62nd annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation. And the bottom line of most speeches and reports had to do with internationalism.

The bottom lines went something like this:

Retired U.S. Army General William Westmoreland told the farmers that a grain embargo is no substitute for men under arms, referring to the year-long sanctions against the Soviet Union imposed by the Carter Administration.

Soybean farmers were reminded of a world population growth of about 20 percent in the next ten years which is anticipated to create dynamic growth in demand for oilseed crops. Between 1980 and 1990, less developed countries will generate a 50 percent growth in demand, according to Allen Housh of Cargill, Inc. grain exporters.

Government involvement in international markets came up for review - and Dr. Lowell Hill, as economic professor at the University of Illinois, said that a comparison of grain market situations in the U.S. with several countries that use some type of national grain boards involved in their international trade favors the non-governmental marketing system used in this country.

Argentina's use of national trading, Dr. Hill said, has led to problems of price declines and excessive carryover, while Canada has found its share of the world markets declining when prices were favorable and increasing in years of unfavorable prices.

Joseph Halow of the North American Export Grain Association, said grain export trade has grown enormously in the past ten years and will continue to grow because of instability in grain exporting and importing countries. He added that it is tremendously important to farmers that they are able to sell their grain wherever they choose, whenever they have it to sell.

Timothy Regan of the office of the U. S. Trade Representative, said that while attention has been focused on expanding export markets for grain and oil crops, export levels for fruits and other specialty crops have been growing just as rapidly. These crops now are being sent to overseas markets that were thought to be inaccessible ten years ago.

"In 1970, nearly 60 percent of all fruit, vegetable and specialty crops went to one country - Canada," Regan said, noting that 1980 horticultural exports from the United States totaled $2.7 billion - up from $394 million in 1970. He cited eastern Europe, the mid-East, Japan, and the far East as the primary sources of new agricultural export trade. He credited aggressive marketing and the devaluation of the dollar as principle forces behind the increases.

Regarding imports to the United States, Regan charged that the Trade Act of 1974, is not adequate to protect horticultural producers from injurious competition. He added that the way the law is written, the U.S. government simply cannot act quickly enough to relieve producers of perishable products from injury before producer returns for an entire season are affected.

U. S. Secretary of Agriculture - designate John Block told the farm group that food can be an effective economic tool in promoting world peace and stability. But he cautioned that this tool can be effective only if we are a reliable supplier of products.

Mississippi precipitation averages a little more than four inches in this period. Less than this amount will increase the deficit rainfall which is already running less than 20 percent of normal for winter.

Mid-January to mid-February weather records contain some of the lowest temperatures on record in the state. Weather experts remind cattlemen and poultrymen to be alert to rapid changes to colder nighttime temperatures.

So far in January, cold fronts have moved southward into the state in one-, two- or three-day intervals. Careful management of pastures and hay supplies is necessary while this pattern persists.

Miles offshore a giant compressor station becomes an ecological refuge

It's an unusual sanctuary, a towering compressor station nearly 50 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico. Marine birds fly here by the hundreds, unafraid, because in this instance man has proved that complex machinery and the creatures of a marine environment can exist side by side—if someone cares enough.

This distant installation pumped more than 280 billion cubic feet of gas ashore in 1979. Much of this was consumed by the Gulf South economic base. That's important. But we think it's just as significant to prove that as the search for new gas reserves grows more intense, native ecology can be preserved and perhaps enhanced.

That's the way we do things at United Gas—where the search for new energy never stops.

USM summer fees increased

Rounding out 1980, the State College Board's December meeting in Jackson ran the complete gamut of athletics, policy, academics, medical affairs, and other matters.

In athletic matters the College Board approved salary increases and contract renewals for coaches at USM and Delta State and approved the appointment of Wiley Peck as assistant basketball coach at Mississippi State.

Delta State head football coach, John Plummer, Melvin Hankinson, basketball coach, and three assistant football coaches will receive salary increases.

At the University of Southern Mississippi, Roland Dale, athletic director, will receive a salary increase as will Jim Carmody, assistant head coach, and Whitey Jordan, offensive coordinator, and six assistant football coaches.

The College Board approved an increase in summer term fees at the University of Southern Mississippi, effective June 1, 1981. Fees for undergraduate courses will increase from $29 per semester hour to $32. At the graduate level, the increase is from $35 to $40 per semester hour.

The University of Mississippi Medical Center will reactivate the Master of Science of Nursing (MSN) program in Nursing of Children and Adolescents.

Mr. Aaron Lee will be the supervisor of building services at Jackson State, effective January 2, 1981. A consolidation of the departments of nuclear engineering and mechanical engineering at Mississippi State has been approved. The new department will be the Department of Mechanical and Nuclear Engineering. Dr. C.T. Carley, formerly head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, will head the new department.

At Mississippi University for Women, two departments have been approved for merger. The office of extended studies and continuing education in nursing are slated for the merger. Extended studies will be responsible for all off-campus, weekend, and evening activities.

A new nursing dean has been approved for the University of Southern Mississippi. Stated to replace retiring Dean Elizabeth Harkins is Dr. Jerri DeWald Laube. Dr. Laube's appointment will become effective January 1, 1981.

The Board approved $2.5 million in change orders, furniture and equipment as well as other needs for new facilities. Regarding existing facilities on the eight university campuses, the Board approved $500,000 in servicing the existing property and ongoing projects.

These expenditures include roofing, fire alarm systems, air-conditioning repair, and other property servicing.

Placed on hold by the board was a request by Mississippi State for approval to spend funds to preplan an indoor swimming pool facility. The facility is slated to cost $35,000.

to preplan and an estimated $2 million to construct.

Dober and Associates, a planning consultant firm from Belmont, Mass., told the Board in a preliminary report that it would take $80 million to meet facility needs on the university campuses.

The report cited $4 million for pre-planning of new facilities and $36 million for capital improvements including equipment and buildings.

The preliminary report was taken under advisement by the Board pending final report by the firm. The planning consultants were retained by the Board to prepare a detailed evaluation of the physical characteristics and conditions of all buildings under the board's supervision with more than 5,000 square feet.

Marsh plant guide available

Dr. Lionel Eleuterius, head of the botany section of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs reports work on the publication "Illustrated Guide to Tidal Marsh Plants of Mississippi and Adjacent States" has been completed. The guide is scheduled for publication early this year.

Persons interested in receiving a copy of this publication should make requests to Eleuterius at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory. "Requests will help determine the number of copies to be printed," said Eleuterius.

"Laymen, especially fishermen and hunters, as well as students and professionals should find the guide of interest and value in identifying and becoming familiar with a large array of tidal marsh plants," Eleuterius explained.

Some 200 vascular plants, 197 angiosperms and three fern species, known to inhabit the salt marshes of Mississippi and Alabama are included in the publication. "The guide was expanded to 200 species over the 120 originally planned because field work brought forth species previously not collected in Mississippi," Eleuterius noted.

Fresh collected living plants were used as much as possible in preparing the illustrations.

HARDY BULBS

Nothing in the entire flower garden is quite as exciting as the sudden appearance in the spring of flowers from hardy or spring flowering bulbs. This spectacular array of color may come from crocuses, daffodils, hyacinths, tulips and other less common bulbs.

When choosing bulbs for your spring garden, select those that are clean, firm unscarred and unbruised. Choose types and colors that when arranged properly in the bulb bed will complement the landscape.

For most areas of Mississippi it will be necessary to buy pre-cooled bulbs or pre-cool them after you buy them. Spring flowering bulbs have chilling requirements that must be satisfied before they will develop roots, grow and bloom. Most outlets sell pre-cooled bulbs.

If bulbs are not pre-cooled, the best way to pre-cool them is to place the bulbs in the crisper of the refrigerator. Tulips require 6 to 8 weeks of pre-cooling at 40 to 45 degrees F., while hyacinths, crocuses, daffodils and other minor bulbs require 4 to 6 weeks.

Pre-cooling will not be necessary if there is fall and winter weather remaining below 40 degrees F. for more than 6 weeks during this time. There are many ways to use hardy bulbs in the landscape. Probably the best effect is to plant bulbs of the same variety in clusters of twelve or more. Spacing would vary from 1 or 2 inches to 6 inches, depending on type of bulb. In this part of the state where the summers are quite hot, a location that provides light shade, such as is found under pines, is beneficial.

By far the most important thing to consider in locating a bulb garden is drainage. A location where internal drainage of the soil is poor and water stands will cause the bulbs to rot.

Planting times for spring bulbs will vary somewhat from north to south Mississippi. A rule of thumb is to plant when the soil begins to cool. This would probably be in October and November in the northern areas and late November and December in the lower areas of the state. Don't delay too long because bulbs need time to develop an extensive root system before they come up and bloom in the spring. They would have enough time to mature if planted immediately.

Proper soil preparation in a bulb bed will reward you with high quality flowers. The bed should be prepared 10 to 12 inches deep. The roots of most bulbs form below the bulb so it is important to prepare to this depth. Roto-tilling or spading an entire area is preferable to digging individual holes in a non-prepared area. Work into the soil 2 to 4 inches of organic matter, such as compost, peat moss or pine bark.

Apply at bed preparation time and work into the soil about 1 heaping teaspoon per square foot of a high phosphorus-low nitrogen fertilizer such as 5-10-5, 6-12-12 or similar analysis. Reapply this amount when bulb growth breaks the ground and again at flowering time.

Remember to plant bulbs of the same kind at a uniform depth so that they will come up uniformly. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and other large bulbs should be planted 6 to 8 inches deep and small bulbs such as crocuses and scillas should be planted 2 to 3 inches deep. It is a good practice to mulch the bed after planting to keep the soil cool.

Water the bed thoroughly after planting and repeat if the soil becomes dry. Most important though "don't overwater." Maintain adequate soil moisture during and after flowering.

The period after flowering is critical because the plant is manufacturing food for the next year's flower. The plant should be kept green as long as possible. Don't remove leaves from the plant until they have turned brown or yellow. If you dig bulbs each year to make room for annuals in the beds, store them in a dry, cool place.

In the northern cooler areas of the state spring flowering bulbs, with the possible exception of tulips, can be left in the ground year round. In the southern hotter areas they should be dug, inspected, stored and replanted or replaced as needed. Because of the extreme summer heat along the coast, spring flowering bulbs should be grown as annuals.

Looking back 100 years brings speculation on next 100 years

By S. GRADY THIGPEN

If you had lived where Picayune now is between 1812 and 1836 your courthouse and county seat would have been at old Center, about one half mile east of where Caesar Church now stands.

If you had lived at Bay St. Louis, Pearl River, Byrd's Chapel, Derby, Savannah, Kiln, Steep Hollow you would have gone to Center to pay taxes, get marriage licenses and go to court, etc.

Center, the county seat of Hancock County, was located on a beautiful sloping hammock by which runs clear sparkling Catahoula creek on the east side and Playground branch, an ever-running little stream of cool, clear water, on the west side. Old homes and old time communities were usually built where water was plentiful.

No better spot could have been found for the county seat from the standpoint of water for the land itself. The land there is a rich sandy loam underlaid with red clay gently sloping toward the two streams, with perfect drainage.

Besides water and drainage there were other reasons why Center was selected as the county seat of newly formed Hancock County. For one thing, it was almost in the geographic center of the county.

Another reason was that it was the main Indian community and center of population of this entire area and had been for probably hundreds of years. The big chief of the Choctaws in this area made his headquarters there.

All roads, maybe I should say all trails, led to this community. It was there that the Indians held their pow-wows, their games and meetings of other kinds. It was there that the Indian ball games took place, pretty much as we now have basketball tournaments here in Picayune.

The original name for this community was an Indian name meaning "Center" or "coming together" or "where everybody meets up."

When the white people came in they used the corresponding English name and called it Center. It seems to have been by far the biggest Indian settlement in this whole section of the country.

Miss Elsie Farr, in her most interesting story of the old place where the R. H. Crosby family now lives, stated that when the old Indian chief who lived there sold that property, he with the other Indians of his tribe went to Center to live.

The big Indian town was located further up the slope from where the Hancock County Courthouse was built and was centered somewhat north of the present road between Catahoula Creek and Playground Branch.

There is much evidence to show that Indians lived there. Members of the Bilbo family who owned this property told me of finding arrow heads, flints and other things when they plowed and worked the land.

Mr. George Bilbo told me recently that they had plowed up many skeletons and bones, skulls, etc. on new ground land. It seems that the Indians buried their dead in shallow graves. When plowing deep on this land these things were brought to the surface.

Mr. A. J. Bilbo who owned this old place for many years and who died about 1940 gave me much information about old Center. He went with me down the slope from his home to where old Center stood. He showed me the location of the old dungeon, or jail where there is still a slight depression in the ground. He showed me where houses had stood as was evidenced by clay deposits from the chimneys. When I was there grown trees had covered the old town site but it was very evident a village had once been there.

Mr. Freeman Lee, who died up in his nineties about 1940, gave me considerable information about old Center.

He remembered seeing soldiers drill there in preparation for going either to the Mexican or Civil war - he did not remember which. He remembered practically all trails leading to Center and that there were no such things as roads as we have now, some trails were wide enough for a wagon to travel over.

He told me that as a young man he rode a horse or walked from the old Lee Homestead in present Leetown to Walkiah Bluff to attend parties or social gatherings. He would cross Catahoula creek and hit the old trail from Center to Walkiah.

He remembered well the old Jackson Military road cut through the heavy pine timber and of passing through Picayune when there was only one house on this old trail in what is now the corporate limits of this city. One time he went to a home of a Mr. Stockstill.

Big rains came and the streams got up so that he was about two weeks getting back home. There were no bridges back then. He told me of a man going from somewhere up on Pearl River to Center to get his marriage license to be married the next Sunday.

The creeks got up and he was gone for about three weeks. His folks and the girl's folks wondered what in the world had become of him, some of them speculating that maybe he had fled the country. But when the water went down he showed up and the marriage took place.

Rev. L. G. Varnado, now deceased, wrote this: "My grandfather Jones was sent here as a peace officer when this area was incorporated as Mississippi territory in 1812. He was born in the Alleghany mountains in Georgia and was used to a rough jungle life as well as the nature and characteristics of Indians.

"He was a fullblooded red Irishman, his father coming direct from the old country. He married a bride who was born in Sweden. They had three children when the government sent him here. He settled in the midst of the Choctaw Village and seat of government which stood east and just across the branch from Caesar, Chikala was then the Choctaw chief.

"My grandfather helped build the first jail there near where his house stood. They dug a pit about eight feet deep, then cut logs and tapered up a pin somewhat like we used to build bird traps and then cut a hole in the top. They would let the prisoners down by a ladder.

"When the ladder was removed there was no way of escape. Food and water were let down by a rope.

"At this place was born Zachariah Jones who became one of the most useful men of his day in this section in the church and civic life, he was also a mechanic.

"Grandfather made close friends of the Indians and was loved for years after."

Mr. Jones has many descendants now in the Caesar area. He lived after the Indians were gone for many years at this old place."

Center was a village with a post-office, log courthouse, a jail, an inn or hotel, a barroom, one or more small stores and a few homes for county officers and others. Henry Nacaise, an old negro who died about 60 years ago at 110 years old told me of going to Center as a boy to a murder trial in which some of his folks were involved. Some men were called as a witness.

The judge told him to be seated in the witness chair but the man continued standing. He was again told to take the witness chair, when he said, "Judge, I rode a mule 30 miles to get here and I am so sore I can't sit down." The judge and everybody laughed and the man was allowed to continue standing.

Murrel, one of the most notorious robbers ever to operate in this section, with a wide reputation as a hold-up man and killer, was once arrested and put in this old dungeon but before he could be tried, confederates came in and rescued him from the jail, or he bribed someone to let him out. Anyway, he got out and was never tried.

Mr. George Bilbo and Mrs. Caz Stockstill both told me of stories their grandmother used to tell them in the long ago about old Center. As a child she went to the old Indian dances which were always held under the same old big tree. Fires for light would be built in a circle around this old tree and the Indians would start early in the night with their dance which always ended at sun up.

They danced and sang all night. I myself, as a child, used to go to the Choctaw dances up in Jasper County where there would always be a big crowd, not only of Indians but of white people.

Mr. Bilbo and Mrs. Stockstill also told me that their grandmother would tell of the many Indian Teepees, wigwags, or whatever you call them that were located between Playground Branch and Catahoula creek, saying there must have been anywhere from 50 to 100 of them, all inhabited by Indians.

Jackson's army camped at this location on its way from Alabama to New Orleans in the fall of 1814. This was an ideal camp site as the land is dry natured, lies well and there is plenty water available.

The first county officers at Center were William Hunt, Clerk of the Superior and county court, Duncal McCall, Sheriff, and later Elihu Carver was Sheriff, Thomas Hunt assessor and collector, Roger A. Heron, justice of the peace, Joseph Willis, justice of the Quorum (I think this is the same as the Board of Supervisors now), William A. Walker, Clerk of the Superior court of Law and Equity.

In 1836 the courthouse was moved to Gainesville. Center died when the courthouse was moved. The Indians left about the same time for the Indian territory.

This is a story of this section right here where we live just a short time ago. What will we have here 100 years from now?
